House Vote Due Monday on Bill For Army Service

Senate Approves Act to Extend Term to 18 Months; May Ignore Time

May Is Irked

Says He's Sick and Tired of Wrangle Hinging on U. S. Defense.

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)—Rep. Cox (D.-Ga.) told the House today it should approve indefinite extension of service for all men in uniform "because war is inescapable."

"The public has given overwhelming support to the President in what he has done and if this means war, there is little reason to complain," the Georgia Congressman told an attentive House as it opened seven hours of debate on its service extension bill.

Earlier Rep. Fish (R.-N. Y.) had attacked the measure as part of a "gigantic conspiracy" he said was designed to involve this ocuntry in wars all over the globe.

Fish catalogued Secretary of War Stimson, who has asked for an indefinite extension of the service of selectees, reservists and national guardsmen, as "our leading warmaker."

The Senate has approved an 18-month extension, but administration leaders in the House still are holding out for the indeterminate term of duty.

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)—The House wasted no time today in calling up army service extension legislation, and administration leaders stood firm for an indefinite extension in preference to the 18-month maximum just voted by the Senate.

The Senate approved the 18-month extension by a 45-to-30 tally yesterday, providing $10-a-month more pay for service beyond one year, and House leaders promptly ordered an unusual forenoon session today with the determination to get a vote by Monday at the latest.

Manifesting no misgivings as to how the House vote would go, Chairman May (D., Ky.) of the military committee predicted that the chamber would disregard the Senate's 18-month time limitation.

"I'm getting sick and tried of this question of whether we are going to defend our country for six more months, or 12 more months or 18 more months," May told reporters. "I believe in national defense without any time limit."

The heart of the Senate measure was the provision that would add a maximum of 18 months additional military duty to the present "hitches" of all selectees, National Guardsmen, reserves, and regular army enlisted men. All are now subject to only one year's service, except the regulars who sign up for three years.

But before the measure passed at the end of a stormy session lasting more than six hours, the Senate wrote in a provision that would give all men with more than a year's service a $10-a-month pay boost. This would have the effect of upping the present base pay of a private soldier to $40 a month after the first year.

Offers Incentive

Just how much this pay increase would cost was something its sponsors did not profess to know, but they asserted at once that it offered an incentive for extra service which would help smooth the rocky road they expected the legislation to encounter in the House.

One House threat was the announced intention of a Republican group, headed by Rep. Short (Mo.), to fight for the complete exemption of selectees from additional duty, and limit the service extension to regulars, reservists and guardsmen.

House leaders, however, exhibited no great worry about the forecasts of the rocky legislation road ahead.

The Senate reached its decision on the legislation after seven days of debate. Shouts of "vote" arose frequently toward the end, but before the final ballot was reached administration forces first had to beat off a series of amendments that started when Senator Downey (D., Calif.) proposed a $30 a month bonus for army, navy and Coast Guard personnel kept in the ranks more than 12 months.

This amendment was scuttled in a voice vote and a subsequent proposal by Senator Langer (R., N. D.) for $100-a-month bonus lost the same way.

Administration leaders, who had argued that pay increase proposals ought to be handled in separate legislation, had a monetary scare when they barely managed to defeat, 37 to 36, an amendment by Senator Johnson (D., Colo.) which would have hiked army wages 25 per cent.

Their fears were justified a few

Pine Grove Avenue Child, 6, Is Dead Of Burns, Shock

Roberta Webster Playing With Matches, Candle in Living Room at Her Home

Roberta Webster, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond R. Webster of 62½ Pine Grove avenue died shortly after 9 o'clock last night at the Kingston Hospital where she had been taken early yesterday afternoon for treatment of severe body burns.

Information obtained by the local police indicated that the child and her three-year-old sister, Lillian had been playing with matches and a candle in the living room of their home, when Roberta's clothing caught fire. Their mother was not in the house at the time and was notified by A. H. Wolfersheim, who operates the small store adjacent to the Webster residence.

Mr. Wolfersheim, was the first to see the child's badly burned body on a couch as he entered the living room, said that he immediately notified his son who is employed at the Fuller Shirt factory, to call a taxi and take the child to the hospital.

Two Children in Room

Only the two children were in the room at the time Roberta's clothing caught fire and the younger child appeared unable to give an exact description of what had taken place. It is believed, however, that the candle upset as the children were playing with it and its flames caught to Roberta's dress.

The child was given as much first aid as was possible before she was rushed to the hospital, but she was so badly burned that all efforts by those at hand were virtually useless.

Clothing Burned Off

Mr. Wolfersheim said that the child's clothing was burned completely off her body at the time he entered the room. The younger child, he indicated seemed to have been far enough removed from the flames to escape without being burned.

The child was admitted to the hospital at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and her death was reported to the local police at 9:10 o'clock last night.

Officers Thomas McGrane and William Krum investigated for the local police and Coroner Frank J. McCardle of Rosendale was notified. The coroner today issued an official verdict of accidential death due to fire, second and third degree burns and shock.

Funeral will be held at the residence, 62½ Pine Grove avenue, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. She is survived, besides her parents, by three brothers, Clarence, Raymond and Harry; also two sisters, Alberta and Lillian.

Join Free French

London, Aug. 8 (AP) — Free French headquarters announced today that more than 2,000 Vichy soldiers had joined Free French forces in Syria up to July 31. They were mainly men who had escaped without waiting for the armistice which gave every French soldier the right to choose between repatriation to France or enlistment in the forces of General Charles De Gaulle.

Seaway Approved

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)—The House rivers and harbors committee approved today the $285,000,000 St. Lawrence Seaway and the $160,000,000 Florida ship canal for inclusion in an omnibus rivers and harbors bill soon to be submitted to Congress.

British Intern Dentz, Reuters Report Claims

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—A Reuters dispatch from Beirut, British-occupied Syria, said today that General Henri Dentz, the former French high commissioner and commander in chief in the Levant states, had been interned by the British.

General Dentz led the Vichy French defense forces against the British and Free French in the 31-day Syrian conflict, which was ended by an armistice July 14.

Thirty-five other Vichy officers also were reported interned. The reason given was failure to release some British and Free French officers who were said to have been flown to an unrevealed destination just before the end of the war.

Newburgh Native Re-enlists Ninth Time in U. S. Army

Sergeant John Westervelt Is 73 and Thinks He Is Oldest Man Now in Army Service

Selfridge Field, Mich., Aug. 8 (AP)—This air corps post is making a great to-do over the ninth re-enlistment of supply Sergt. John W. Westervelt, who, at 73, believes he's the oldest man in the U. S. Army.

The ruddy-cheeked, silver-haired sergeant is modestly proud of a string of service stripes on his left sleeve that leaves little room between wrist and elbow. But he talks less about tomorrow's re-enlistment ceremony than about a 15-day furlough which he has timed nicely to begin just 20 minutes after the last hand-shake.

Sergeant Westervelt has served 25 years in the regular army. Before that he had been a National Guardsmen for 18 years. He was mustered into the regular army in 1917 from his native town of Newburgh, N. Y., with his National Guard unit.

He is looking forward to one more hitch that will carry him past the 30-year retirement mark. Would he like to stay in the olive-drab even after that?

"No, b'gosh," the sergeant insisted vehemently. "When my time is up I'm going to get out, and rest a bit—enjoy myself. By then, I figure, I'll have put in enough service for Uncle Sam."

The old sergeant, an ardent fisherman, plans to spend a good share of his furlough at his own lake cabin. He may pay a visit to Fort Custer, Mich., where he served 15 of his years in the regular army.

He'll go to Kalamazoo, Mich., not far from Fort Custer, because, he said, most of his friends live there and "I can't walk across the street down there without somebody saying, 'Hello, John.'"

Then there's the girl he left behind.

"A woman I met ten years ago," he explained shyly.

Westervelt didn't go overseas himself, but a son, Ray, now 50, was an ordnance sergeant with the A. E. F.

The old sergeant, a former electrician who insists he hasn't lost the ability to use a pair of linemen's spurs, says he's spry because he "comes from a long-lived family" and not because of what he does or doesn't eat or drink.

Highland Farmer Is Crushed Beneath Tractor

Samuel Castellano, Highland farmer, was seriously injured about 10 o'clock this morning when a Fordson tractor, with which he was mowing in a field on the Castellano property near the Schantz feed mill at Highland, turned over on a side hill and crushed him badly.

The Highland State Police station was notified and help was given immediately. Dr. H. N. Moeller treated the injured man after which he was taken in an ambulance to Vassar Bros. Hospital at Poughkeepsie.

Nazi Air Force Will Top U. S.

That Is Opinion of Colonel Olds, Who Heads Ferry Command, Based on Current Expansion Program

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)—The United States, Col. Robert Olds said today, will have an army air force only half the present size of Germany's luftwaffe even when the current expansion program is completed.

Col. Olds, veteran military flier, heads the army's new ferry command which delivers warplanes from factories to ports for shipment overseas.

"The luftwaffe has seven independent air forces and more than a million officers and men," Olds wrote in the periodical Flying and Popular Aviation. "We have four such forces and about 180,000 officers and men in our army air force organization.

"By the time our airplane construction and training program is complete, we will have an army air force about half the size of the luftwaffe. Where we go from there depends upon the size of the luftwaffe when the program is completed."

Other official sources reported that latest revised plans contemplate about 83 groups of combat planes, and more than 300,000 officers and men to fly and maintain them. Such a force is not expected to be realized for a year or more, even though the rate of training pilots is to be stepped up this fall to 30,000 a year and upwards of 80,000 warplanes are on other now in American plants for the army, navy and Great Britain.

Secretary Morgenthau Asks Stiffer Tax Clauses to Reach Small Income Groups

Suggests 12 Changes to Boost Yield of Bill; Gives No Figures on New Slashes

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)—Advocating an "all-out tax program for defense," Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau asked Congress today to tax millions of additional persons with small incomes by cutting personal income tax exemptions and to stiffen other taxes on married couples, corporations and others.

He told the Senate finance committee that the revenue from the House-approved tax bill should be increased from its present $3,206,200,000 to "at least" $3,500,000,000. He hinted strongly he would like much more.

Reading a 15-page statement, the treasury head asked a dozen changes to boost the yield of the tax bill, but said his proposed new taxes on "millions of people with low incomes" should not be attempted "unless we reach in other places where ability to pay is escaping its fair share of taxes."

He explained that this applied to married couples and corporations, particularly.

Gives No Figures

Morgenthau gave no figures on how deeply he thought personal exemptions should be cut. Only last year, however, the exemption for heads of families was cut from $2,500 to $2,000 and the exemption for single persons was reduced from $1,000 to $800. Suggestions have been heard recently that the new exemptions might be $1,500 for married couples and $700 for single persons.

President Roosevelt suggested lately that the exemptions be $1,500 and $750. The House Ways and Means committee rejected the idea.

"We have now come," Morgenthau said, "to the point where it is a matter not merely of fundamental equity, but of the utmost necessity that all exemptions from taxation be reduced to the absolute minimum." * * *

"Under the bill before you the base has been broadened to add about 2,000,000 new taxpayers, but even so there will remain a relatively large proportion of the population in the lower income groups which will not be directly affected by the income tax.

"A further lowering of the exemptions would produce some additional revenue and in addition it would give millions of Americans an opportunity—a welcome opportunity—to make a direct contribution through taxes to the defense of their country."

Would Make It Easy

Morgenthau coupled this suggestion with a proposal that all the traditional complexities of making out an annual income tax return should be abolished for the small taxpayer.

He said complicated returns were necessary "for persons with substantial incomes who can afford high priced lawyers and accountants," but for the small taxpayer there ought to be a simple form on which would be printed a table of tax liabilities so that no computations would be necessary.

Despite the fact that just before passing the tax bill earlier this week, the House rejected a proposal to require all married couples to file joint income tax returns regardless of whether husbands and wives earn separate incomes, Morgenthau proposed reinstatement of this provision "with appropriate relief granted only where both husband and wife work outside the home."

Other suggestions to raise more money were to reduce the depletion allowances given oil and similar companies in figuring their income taxes; abolishing tax exemptions on state and local governmental bond issues; and even stiffer estate and gift taxes than the new rates proposed by the House.

Morgenthau also urged that "along with increased taxation should go the maximum reduction in the ordinary non-defense expenditures of government."

Cites Statistics

Morgenthau added that Congress should not abstain from heavy taxes with any idea of leaving families more income to spend. He cited statistics indicating that the rise in prices of things people buy in the last year already had reduced the purchasing power of their income as much as the proposed tax bill would take money away from them directly.

On the other hand, he explained, the more money that is raised through taxes, the less the defense program will have a tendency to cause prices to rise. "It is clear that rising prices tax the family

Russians Set Losses At 600,000 in Warfare

Hitler's Claims Are Put Down as Fairy Tales; Nazi Casualties Are 1½ Millions

Moscow, Aug. 8 (AP)—Terming "Arabian fairy tales" Adolf Hitler's claims of vast military successes, the Russians estimated today that six and one-half weeks of war had cost the Germans more than 1,500,000 men, put their own losses at 600,000 dead, wounded and missing and declared the Nazi blitzkrieg a complete failure.

While acknowledging the conflict had resulted in terrific casualties and heavy destruction of equipment, a Soviet communique characterized as fantastic the German assertions that 895,000 Russians had been captured and many times that number had been slain.

Such claims, it said, were made only to bolster the morale of the German people, who, the Russians claimed, have been rendered uneasy by rumors of Nazi reverses and a shortage of food supplies at home.

The Russians admitted the loss of 5,000 tanks, 7,000 cannon and 4,000 planes, but protested that these losses were small when compared with those which the Nazis had suffered and which they claimed to have inflicted upon the Red army.

Or Visa Versa

A series of special German communiques Wednesday reported the Russians had lost 13,145 tanks, 10,377 guns and 9,082 planes.

As a matter of fact, the Russians declared, the Germans themselves have lost 6,000 tanks, 8,000 cannon and 6,000 planes and have suffered a severe blow to their fighting capacity and morale.

The Soviet war bulletin asserted that as ridiculous as the German reports of Russian casualties are their claims to have broken the "Stalin Line."

In cold reality, the communique asserted, no such thing as a "Stalin Line" ever existed and Russia's defenses still are unimpaired de-

Hopson Signs Over Bulk of Fortune

Imprisoned Utility Magnate Will Part With Major Part of $5,000,000

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)—Howard C. Hopson, utility magnate who once dominated the giant Associated Gas and Electric system, has signed, in his federal prison cell, an agreement to turn over to the system and to the federal and New York state governments a major part of his remaining fortune of about $5,000,000.

An agreement among the "Hopson interests," which included also members of his family and some of his corporations the principal Associated Gas companies and the federal and state governments was filed in federal district court here.

The agreement, to become effective, must be approved by Judge Vincent L. Leibell, who has jurisdiction over reorganization of the Associated system, and by the state government on a tax compromise offered by Hopson. The compromise offered on federal taxes was accepted yesterday at Washington.

Hopson was convicted December 31, last, of using mails to defraud in connection with misappropriation of funds of system companies and sentenced to five years, which he is serving at Northeastern penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa. He signed the agreement there August 4, it was revealed.

At the time of his trial Hopson's misappropriations were estimated as high as $20,000,000.

C.I.O. Pledges Aid

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—CIO leaders pledged immediate aid today to an industry-government plan for re-employing workers displaced temporarily because of plant conversions under the defense program. Walter P. Reuther, director of the CIO's General Motors Department, and Nathan Cowan, sub-regional director of CIO Steel Workers, joined in acclaiming the plan drawn up with aid of the office of production management and large Buffalo area defense factories. Meanwhile, the sixth national convention of the newly-broadened CIO Union—The United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural implement workers—pushed steps to organize a million members by 1945 with special attention on Chicago, New York and the aircraft industry.

May Turn in License Plates

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)—Motorists may be required to turn in their 1941 license plates in order to obtain 1942 tags because of the shortage of sheet steel. The office of price administration and civilian supply today requested states to impose such a requirement, and said that steel was being allocated for the 1942 plates only because the time was too short to enable states to find substitutes.

Japan Vulnerable In Two Ways to Attack by Enemy

Blockade Could Strangle Nation, Bombs Could Fire Houses and Other Buildings

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Freeman Special News Service)

Japan will be either very sure of herself, or desperate in the extreme because of economic difficulties and lack of essential supplies, if she makes further moves which may precipitate military action on the part of Britain and the United States.

When it comes to war, Nippon is terribly vulnerable in two respects. She would be in danger of strangulation by blockade, and her tiny island empire with its lightly built and highly inflammable structures would be a nightmare target for bombs, especially of the incendiary type.

That these two points are to the fore in Japanese calculations is indicated in today's news from Tokyo. A government spokesman charges America, Britain, China and the Dutch East Indies with military, political and economic encirclement of Japan. The Domei New Agency announces that the government, recognizing the urgency of protecting Japan's industrial centers, is organizing an air defense bureau.

Would Feel Secure

So far as concerns naval attack, the Japanese likely would feel fairly secure in their own home waters—if Japan were self-contained and didn't have to import the bulk of her essential supplies. Every little bay and cove in her saw-tooth coast-line is supposedly mined so heavily that if a hostile fleet should venture into these waters the warships would come popping out of the sea like peas off a hot skillet.

But Nippon has to import—and from far afield. Her dependence on America and Britain both for necessities and for markets to absorb her products is heavy. Even the trade restrictions already clamped

Mussolini Sends Body of His Son For Burial at Il Duce's Home Town

Pisa, Italy, Aug. 8 (AP)—Premier Mussolini sent the body of his son Bruno to Predappio, Il Duce's home town, for burial after a war hero's funeral procession today through the flower-strewn streets of this ancient city.

Arriving in the darkened room of the local Fascist headquarters where Bruno lay in state with two companions who died in an air crash yesterday, Mussolini paused long beside the open casket.

Those in the room said afterward "his severe face expressed the emotional pride of his immense sorrow."

Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Duce's son-in-law, did not accompany him to the funeral. An official announcement said he was "indisposed" in Rome, but did not specify the nature of his illness.

Bruno's mother, Donna Rachele; his 23-year-old widow, and his sister, Countess Edda Ciano ,heavily veiled, stood aside when the coffin was taken out on the shoulders of officers of the air force and Fascist blackshirt fighting squads.

They followed Il Duce as he slowly descended the stairs to the street. Highest Fascist generals, admirals and German officers completed the procession.

All of Pisa's 75,000 inhabitants seemed to jam the streets. Children continually threw flowers in front of the procession and the city's churchbells tolled.

Russian Marshal Tells People to Fight Nazis and That Victory Is Near

Word Is Official

Tokyo Takes Official Notice of Cordon by Powers

(By The Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's high command reported today that German troops knifing deep into the lower Ukraine had annihilated a Red army force trapped southeast of Uman, 125 miles south of Kiev, capturing more than 30,000 prisoners and the supreme commander of the Russian Sixth Army.

Earlier, unofficial Nazi reports said Kiev itself, the Ukraine capital, had been surrounded. But the high command report indicated the main German thrust was directed at cutting off the Black Sea port of Odessa, some 140 miles below Uman.

While the Germans pictured their armies as plunging headlong against wobbling Soviet defenses, Russia's Marshal Semeon Timoshenko voiced a new note of confidence in this appeal to peoples in German-occupied territories.

"Join your comrades and fight, starve, shoot and blow up the Germans and help the Red army rout Hitler's dogs. Spill blood for blood, death for death, for the hour of victory is near."

Dispatches from Istanbul quoted well-informed sources there as saying that Britain was prepared to send several divisions of Indian troops through Afghanistan to bolster Russia's defenses in the oil-rich Caucasus.

These sources reported that Afghanistan would formally protest the passage of British troops into the U.S.S.R. but ultimately would yield.

In the north, the Nazi high command said German columns driving toward Leningrad had captured Wesenberg, 68 miles southeast of the old czarist capital, and penetrated to the Gulf of Finland.

If true, this would indicate that the Russian-held capital of Estonia, Tallinn, is cut off by land. It would mean, too, that the Russian Baltic fleet was in jeopardy from German guns pressing toward its big base at Kornstadt.

Hitler's field headquarters also declared that German and Finnish troops driving on Leningrad from the north, in a giant squeeze maneuver, were "making further successful progress."

London military quarters said there were indications that the Germans were advancing into southwest Russia in a move to encircle the key port of Odessa, on the Black Sea, and that the main Odessa-Kiev railroad line had been cut.

Meanwhile, the possibility arose that Russian warplanes had bombed Berlin during the night for the first time in the war.

The Germans reported that hostile planes attacked the capital overnight for the 80th time, killing some civilians and inflicting minor property damage. London officials said the RAF had not raided Berlin.

From their bases, either in Estonia or in the Smolensk sector, Soviet planes would have to fly more than 600 miles to raid Berlin—1,200 miles round trip.

Russian military dispatches again reported fierce overnight fighting in the familiar sectors of Kakisalmi, 75 miles north of Leningrad; Smolensk, 230 miles west of Moscow; Bel Tserkov, 50 miles southwest of Kiev; and in Estonia.

R. A. F. Raids Germany

The first anniversary of the opening of the battle of Britain, when German and British planes clashed in the greatest air battles the world has seen, found the RAF carrying its own day and night offensive against occupied France and western Germany while the Germans directed small forces against Britain.

Berlin reported that a few British planes broke through to the capital, killing some civilians and causing minor damage.

London said the main objectives of last night's raids were Essen, Hamm and Dortmund.

German planes bombed a few places in eastern England and Scotland causing some injuries and damage. Germans said five British planes were shot down over England during the night.

From Ankara came reports that Germany had warned Iran she would sever diplomatic relations with the strategic middle east county if German nationals were expelled as Britain has asked.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the British House of Commons Wednesday the middle east army was ready to strike new blows and he called Germans now in Iran "extremely dangerous to the independence of the country in which they are found."

In Berlin, a Nazi spokesman denied the Ankara report, asserting that Iran had already rejected British demands for the ousting of Germans and that the Reich had every reason to be satisfied with Iran's attitude.

The far east crisis boiled along in a torrent of charges and counter-charges.

U. S. is Accused

Australia's Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies declared his country "stands with bated breath in a most vital hour of her history," while the Japanese bitterly accused the United States, Great Britain, China and the Dutch East Indies of clamping a military-economic ring around the empire.

Japan's authoritative naval expert, Lieut.-Commander Tota Ishimaru, said Manchukuo, China, Indo-China and Thailand had already joined Japan's "Co-prosperity sphere," and he suggested:

"Getting the Indies oil and Malay rubber is a bit difficult, but it should be a cinch if we tackle the problem after the German fashion."

Prime Minister Menzies proclaimed solemnly that "the war has taken an ominous turn for Australia" in the past week's developments, "but we are immeasurably better equipped for defense now than in 1939.

"Australia," he added, "has never yet run away from the foe."

A Reuters (British New Agency) dispatch quoted the Singapore ministry of information as saying that American fighter planes now being delivered to British bases in Burma would prove "one of the answers to Japan's new strategic move in Indo-China."

The ministry said the U. S.-built planes were ready to "chop to bits" any Japanese bombers attempting to attack China's Burma Road from newly-acquired bases in Indo-China.

Domei, the official Japanese news agency, asserted that the British government had secretly approached Thailand for use of military bases there. Simultaneously, the official Thai radio said in a broadcast from Bangkok:

"Thailand is extremely grateful to those offering her protection, but begs to decline same with thanks."

Tokyo newspapers charged that Britain had massed 150,000 troops in Burma, on the Thailand frontier, and Koh Ishii, Japanese cabinet spokesman, complained angrily:

"Why is it necessary for the British to make such preparations? Whether encircling or not, they are making military preparations."

income just as surely as do income taxes," he said, adding:

"If, in an attempt to protect the incomes of our people, we hold down taxes and as a result the cost of living rises, we shall have taxed them just as surely as if we had levied on them directly—and we shall still have the inflated costs of defense to pay later from taxes."

Democratic Leader Barkley (Ky.) told reporters that "we should study every section of the bill to try to raise all the money we possibly can."

Senator Connally (D., Tex.), a finance committeeman, had urged that an additional $1,000,000,000 be sought. Barkley said he did not know whether such an increase could be obtained, but added that "we should not limit ourselves to the goal of $3,500,000,000 originally fixed in the House."

Shipyard Strike May Be Sent to F.D.R. for Action

C. I. O. Strike Continues to Tie Up $493,000,000 Worth of Naval and Merchant Work

(By The Associated Press)

A C. I. O. strike which continued to hold up $493,000,000 worth of naval and merchant shipbuilding at Kearny, N. J., may be referred directly to President Roosevelt for action, a defense official indicated.

Such a course may be followed said Frank Graham, acting chairman of the national defense mediation board, unless the 18,000 employes of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company go back to work soon.

In a previous dispute which the mediation board referred to the White House, President Roosevelt ordered troops to reopen the North American Aviation Company's California plant. That factory had government orders for warplanes. The Kearny shipyard is building a cruiser and six destroyers for the navy, in addition to several urgently needed tankers and cargo ships. It also has contracts for six more cruisers and 21 more destroyers, on which construction has not yet started.

The Navy Department is watching the Kearny situation closely, a spokesman said.

Three other shipyard strikes were called yesterday in east coast yards of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, two at Brooklyn and one at Staten Island, N. Y. Both Brooklyn strikes ended quickly. C. I. O. union leaders conferred with the management and ordered the 6,000 who had walked out to return to their jobs. What occurred at the conference was not made public.

Despite the C. I. O.'s decision to return to work, the A. F. L. Teamsters Union, which likewise was engaged in a controversy with Bethlehem, continued to picket the two Brooklyn yards and the one in Staten Island.

The chief point of issue in the Kearny controversy was a modified union shop, C. I. O. spokesmen said. The mediation board, in making recommendations last week for settlement of the long controversy over a working contract, suggested a modified union shop, vacation adjustments and 12 per cent blanket pay increase.

The management made the wage increase, over the old scales which ranged from 62½ cents to $1 an hour, but did not accept all the other recommendations.

'Stalling' Charged

C. I. O. officials said the Bethlehem walkouts were called because the company had been "stalling" on contract negotiations. The Union has asked that the pay of skilled workers be increased from 78 cents to $1.03 an hour. The management, however, said the trouble involved a dispute between the C. I. O. shipbuilders and the A. F. L. Teamsters Union. The A. F. L. group was reported picketing the plants because Bethlehem had rejected their demand for a boost from 72 cents to $1 an hour.

The new cruiser Atlanta was to have slid off the ways at Kearny Saturday, but the launching was postponed because of the strike.

Two A. F. L. strikes, involving New York city electricians, the other boilermakers at the Todd Galveston Dry Docks, Inc., Galveston, Texas, were referred to the mediation board yesterday and the conciliation group's first action was to telegraph requests to the strikers to resume work pending early hearings in the controversies.

The electricians walked out July 29 in all parts of New York city, contending that the Consolidated Edison Company had violated an agreement to employ only AFL members in construction of a new power plant. The Galveston Boilermakers, out since July 15, are demanding a closed shop contract.

Avert Another Strike

The mediation board announced that terms had been reached for averting a threatened strike of CIO auto workers against the Aluminum Company of America's (Alcoa) Los Angeles plant. Details of the settlement plan were withheld, but the union had been seeking a union shop, wage increases and paid vacations.

The aluminum firm was involved in two other labor developments.

A small group of CIO die casters who said they were protesting the presence of an AFL organizer in the factory, held up the work of 1,785 other employes yesterday in Alcoa's Cleveland plant.

At Pittsburgh, Alcoa executives said they would resume negotiations at Philadelphia Tuesday with CIO aluminum workers who are demanding elimination of a wage differential it claims exists between northern and southern Alcoa plants.

Other top labor developments included:

San Diego, Calif.—Construction of a $2,500,000 navy ammunition dump at Fallbrook was to be resumed today after an agreement was reached to end a strike of 60 building and construction trades workers. The men are to receive 12½ cents an hour more than going union scales, in lieu of receiving compensation for room and board at the site of the project. Figures were not available on the current wage scales for various classifications of workers.

Los Angeles—Douglas, Vultee and Northrop Aircraft Companies announced increases in minimum wages for beginners, starting at a scale of 60 cents an hour with a five-cent increase every four weeks until 75 cents is reached. Douglas has been paying 52½ cents, with an increase to 60 in three months; Vultee, 55, increased to 62½ in 60 days, and Northrop, 55, increased to 70 in three months. The new minimum wage scale was the same as that adopted at the North American plant after a recent strike.

Plum Brook, Ohio. — Six-day strike of A. F. L. carpenters ended at a $40,000,000 ordnance plant under construction. The request of 675 carpenters for an increase of 25 cents an hour for a new scale of $1.37½ will be submitted to the mediation board.

Canton, Ohio—About 100 employes of Timkin Roller Bearing Company walked out following unsuccessful demands of C. I. O. workers in the carburizing department for a five-cent increase in the current wage scale, which ranges from 72½ to 82 cents an hour.

New London, Conn.—A. F. L. painters employed on private jobs and government projects quit working and announced their intention of remaining away from work until their pay was increased from $1 to $1.25 an hour. About 150 of them had been employed at the Groton submarine base.

Springfield, Ohio. — After a sit-down by some C. I. O. workers yesterday at the International Harvester Company, the Union decided at a night meeting to return to work today and resume negotiations with the company for a contract embodying wage increases. The present average for assembly line workers is about 90 cents an hour.

'Human Fly' Will Scale Stuyvesant Hotel

Johnnie Wood of Los Angeles, who at the age of 53 still is scaling buildings from Maine to California in order to satisfy the craving of the public for thrills, is to give an exhibition in Kingston Saturday evening, when at 7:30 he will scale the John street front of the Stuyvesant Hotel. He performed the same feat here 15 years ago.

Johnnie says that he is the only "Human Fly" left in this country. Two others, both of whom appeared in Kingston, are dead, he said, Babe White having died in Santa Monica, Calif., eight years ago and Henry Roland in Greenville, Tenn., four years ago.

After reaching the top of the Stuyvesant Saturday evening Johnnie will be blindfolded and will carry his wife on his shoulders around the edge of the roof, while she leans out in space at a sharp angle. Mrs. Wood, before her marriage, was for years a member of the famous "Six American Aces," a troop of aerialists.

spite territorial losses on various sectors of the farflung front.

"Certainly the Soviet government with time created some fortifications where it was necessary," declared the Russian information bureau." However, no (Stalin Line exists or ever existed. The line was invented by the Germans to justify their tremendous losses, which are due not to the existence of a 'special line' in defense of the U. S. S. R. but to the fact that the Red army and the Soviet people defend their native land with the greatest bravery and courage and transform every inch of the native land into fortifications."

Chiding the Germans for failure to report on their own losses, the Russians accused the Nazis of padding their reports on the number of Soviet prisoners captured by including thousands of civilian prisoners.

"Occupying a Soviet district," the communique said, "the Fascists immediately and forcibly mobilize the population, rural employes, etc., for arduous hard work and drive them to the rear, declaring this population to be war prisoners.

"Certainly in this way one may not only count 895,000 war prisoners allegedly captured by the Germans during the war but even considerably more."

on Japan by the United States and Britain have raised havoc with Nippon, and a blockade would be the last straw, forcing the Japanese to break it by naval assault or surrender.

Powerful Pressure

Our oil embargo ration has put powerful pressure on Japan. Secretary of the Navy Knox estimates that the Japanese supply of oil is sufficient for from 14 to 16 months only in actual war conditions. Japan already is having to suspend service on 38 lines served by gasoline-powered cars. Tokyo is trying to replace the all-important scrap iron which came from America by salvaging shipwrecks.

By utilizing present British and American bases a blockade could be swung about Japan so as to cut her off from the major sources of supply excepting China, which lacks many vital requirements. The blockade would be particularly strengthened if it had a Russian base for its northern anchor, and that would seem possible in view of the Anglo-Russian alliance and the aid being furnished the Muscovites by this country. No wonder the Japanese navy's official spokesman is concerned for fear the United States may secure bases from Russia.

As for bombing, Japan has for years lived in dread of the Russian air fleet in Siberia. Much of Japan is exposed to possible raids from Vladivostok over a radius of only about 600 miles.

Planes Reach China

Apart from that, however, reports have been cropping up from China about the arrival of long distance bombers and fighting planes from America — accompanied by Yankee pilots and mechanics for service in the Chinese army. If the Chinese have indeed received these reinforcements—and it wouldn't surprise me if they had, in considerable numbers — then the Japanese have another worry. In any event, it would be possible for Britain and America to operate long-distance bombers against Japan from Chinese bases, and from Russian if those were made available.

Japan is so narrow and exposed that it would be difficult for her to conceal military objectives. The port of Osaka, for instance, which is Japan's greatest city and industrial center, lies wide open to bombing and could be virtually wiped out in a short time if an enemy air fleet could get into full action over it.

Y.M.C.A. Summer Schedule Will Now Hit Full Stride

The second half of the Y.M.C.A. summer schedule and program is expected to hit full stride next week with a few minor changes.

The Daily Home Vacation Camp closed on Wednesday with an outing at Williams' Lake after having had a highly successful six-weeks' program. All campers have been urged to join the regular building program for the remainder of the summer.

Younger boys to 15 years, enjoy the daily swims, Tuesday through Friday at 11:30 a. m., while older boys use the privileges on the same days at 2 p. m. Teaching non-swimmers to swim is stressed in these classes and the "graduates" are then given more freedom of the pool.

The Junior Girl's Class which meets at 3 p. m. on Wednesdays and Fridays continues to prove popular. Mass instruction and individual attention is given in accordance with the pupil's ability. Nearly all former non-swimmers have been taught to swim and are now entering the advanced stages.

Professional and Business Girls' class members continue instruction on Wednesday and Friday evenings. Several young women are emerging from the beginners' into the advanced stages of swimming while others are preparing for examination in life saving methods.

Paddle-ball is a favorite indoor sport with men. The gym is open daily for this activity and two or three games, followed by a shower and swim tends to knock the summer sluggishness out of one's system.

Swimming instruction for men is given either by appointment or by private courses and several recent non-swimmers are now enjoying the thrill of swimming in deep water.

The swimming pool, measuring 40x20 feet, contains over 57,000 gallons of pure filtered water with continuous circulation and is maintained according to the standards prescribed by the New York State Department of Health.

During the remainder of the season, all membership rates will be reduced to one-half and the expiration date has been advanced to October 1st.

Pertinent Facts On Conscription

Deferred Selective Service registrants in this state today were urged by Brigadier General Ames T. Brown, New York State Director of Selective Service, to volunteer for service with State and local civilian defense agencies.

"Many men have been granted deferment because of occupation or dependency or because they could not meet the physical standards of the Army," General Brown stated, "but these men are qualified to perform some work in connection with civilian defense activities and should offer their services to these agencies."

General Brown went on to say that the State Council of Defense, under General John F. O'Ryan, Director, had set up 61 city and 62 county local defense councils in the state and no matter where a New York registrant lived there is something he can do for national defense. Defense plans not only include the State Guard but also civilian defense projects for police, fire, water supply, health and sanitation, evacuation, transportation, communications, shelter, and food, air raids, and administration and records. If a registrant has any difficulty getting in touch with his local council, he should write to the State Council of Defense, 444 Broadway, Albany, N. Y., which will put him in touch with a council in his area.

"With the adoption of the Selective Training and Service Act, Congress gave no indication that it intended deferment should excuse deferred registrants from the obligation which rests upon every man—that of helping his country in times of emergency," General Brown declared. "Every man is expected to do his duty, in one way or another, when a crisis threatens the national security."

The General asserted:

"Many of our young men have entered the armed forces, leaving at home others who, for one reason of another, have had their military training deferred. Those who remain owe it to those who have been called and they also owe it to their country to help with its defense when they are needed.

"They can do their part by offering their services in the interests of civilian defense."

He declared:

"In the very near future almost every community will be engaged in civilian defense activities. Such activities, of course, cover a wide range and should include tasks for all men who are deferred from military training for one reason or another."

No man should shirk his responsibility if it is humanly possible for him to take part in the increasing civilian defense activities, General Brown said.

Social Workers to Meet

Lectures will be conducted Monday and Tuesday, October 20-21. Under the leadership of outstanding social work authorities, the courses will include practically all phases of modern-day work problems, techniques, methods, public relations, both in private agencies and public welfare departments.

No Signs of Car Involved, State Sheriff Deputies

Sheriff Molyneaux said yesterday afternoon that investigation so far by deputies from his office had disclosed no signs that any other vehicle was involved in the crash of Sergeant Gordon Richards motorcycle at the foot of the Colonel Payne hill at an early hour that morning, which resulted in his death at the Kingston Hospital some hours later.

Deputy Sheriff McCullough, who investigated at the scene of the accident, following report to the sheriff's office, found no evidence of any other car being involved. He took Sergeant Richards motorcycle, which someone had placed against the bank alongside the road and removed it to the Barringer gas station. He examined the machine and found that the right mudguard had been scraped, apparently when it upset upon the highway. He said there were few, if any other injuries to the machine apparent.

Deputy Sheriffs Ellsworth and Segelken, who later made an examination of the machine and viewed the scene of the crash, came to the same conclusion. In their opinion Richards for some reason, perhaps through striking an uneven spot in the highway, had lost control of his machine and been thrown upon the roadway, sustaining the extensive fracture of the skull and brain injuries that caused his death.

Woodstock Play Stars Male Actors

Near Capacity House Sees 'Wind and the Rain'

It was a night for the men in the cast at the Woodstock Playhouse where "The Wind and the Rain," by Merton Hodge, opened to a near capacity house last evening.

The play offered the best chance of the season to Duane McKinney, whose work has been commendable to date, but nothing like the acting he turned in last night as Charles Tritton, a bewildered young medical student in a Scottish University.

Young McKinney upheld the mood he set for his part at the outset, throughout the play and he showed strong sympathetic feeling for the role in the higher dramatic moments.

William Halstead was also excellent as Gilbert Raymond, the playboy student, and he provided about all the comedy of the night. Stephen Sandes, who is well known to patrons of the Elwyn theatre, added his looks and talent for a well-rounded effect on the male side of the drama and Robert Harris, a new youngster on the Playhouse stage provided a pleasant surprise for the audience in the bit he did in the third act.

Ivan Triesault fit well in the part of Paul Duhamel, the older member of the student group, and Jess Gregg was effective in another bit.

Phyllis Ellerman played Anne Hargreaves, who helped Student Charles Tritton forget his nostalgic leanings toward London and his mother who ran a shop there. She also managed to make him pay less attention to the fact that he was to please his mother by marrying Jill Mannering, played by Joen Arliss, the young lady with a marked versatility.

The play continues through to Sunday night.

SAFE SKYSCRAPERS

The skyscraper method of construction makes the tall buildings of modern years safer than lower modes in case of bombing, says William Orr Ludlow of Madison, N. J., in a report to the American Institute of Architects. This is not because of the height of these buildings, but because the great weight caused by their height has made necessary unusual strength. Several columns of the Empire State Building could be wrecked and the structure would still hold together without collapse, said the architect. An entire story of a steel skeleton building can be burnt out and no other story will be damaged, because the fireproofing has been so thorough. An outside wall of one story can be knocked out and the walls of the other stories will remain as they were.

There is also a psychological factor—that of panic. It takes much longer to empty a skyscraper than a lower building, so the architect figures that there will not be streets suddenly crowded with frightened people. It's a long walk down the stairs of a many-storied building, however, and there might be panics and falls on stairways. Strong people are apt to keep their heads under any circumstances, and weak people lose theirs easily, so that factor seems not too important.

More interesting are the statements that above the first three stories the air would be clear of flying debris, of compressed air from falling bombs and probably of poison gas.

It's not pleasant to contemplate the bombing of American cities. But it seems to be necessary. The really important point is to keep the enemy east of the Atlantic.

TAX FACTS

Here are a few things the new defense revenue bill will mean to that not-so-mythical average American.

If he paid an income tax last year and has about the same income this year, he will find his tax increased by a five per cent surtax imposed on the whole taxable income without any deduction for earned income. The surtax will range from five per cent for "beginners," one might say, to 75 per cent for the income above $5,000,000.

The average American will find himself paying a flat $5 tax on his automobile or airplane or yacht, more on the last item if the yacht is longer than 28 feet. The tax on purchase of a new car will be double what it has been.

The excise taxes on many other items will be upped a bit. The tax on admissions, for example, will begin a nine cents instead of 20. Sporting goods, matches, radios and parts, luggage, the check for an evening at a cabaret, the telephone bill, and so on, will all carry a tax of some sort.

The average American will grumble. Who has a better right? But he will say to himself, or aloud to his friends, that America and all it means to him are well worth the cost of their defense. Of course he expects that his money will be spent wisely and only for defense purposes.

HEAT AND LIGHT

Americans are often accused of facing controversies with too much heat and not enough light. But now that heating our houses next winter may become a problem, a reader suggests that we use our light to give us heat. He thinks we should use all the light we want next winter, and take advantage of the heat emanating from the light bulbs.

This sounds well on a warm day, but he may find next winter that the heat he gets from his extra illumination doesn't give the equivalent of even one thin sweater. His thermostat probably won't know how light it is.

If the ingenious reader lived in the days of the coal oil lamp, now, his idea might have more merit. On a hot night of a country vacation, where the mail comes in at supper time, there always arises the terrible dilemma—whether it is worse to sit beside the lamp—with the thermometer registering 100 or more degrees a couple of feet away from it, or to waste valuable swimming or basking time next morning reading the news.

PREMATURE RELEASE

The German press has been speaking of "the former German Embassy in Moscow," "the former German ambassador to the U.S.R.R.," and so on. An authorized source said simply, in explanation, that "the press probably had a fine instinct for the realities of the future." He added:

"There will not be any Soviet Union at the end of this war and there will not be any Bolshevist regime which created this union of Soviet States."

This might prove true, but it seems a little early for the Germans to assume that the Soviet regime will dissolve because the Germans are in control. Moscow and Leningrad are proving tougher nuts to crack than Paris was. And France is not conquered yet—far from it.

It looks to the rest of the world's press as if Herr Goebbels were giving out some of his prepared copy prematurely. Some of his futures, assumed as accomplished, may not happen at all.

PREPARING FOR MARCH 15

The tax anticipation notes which the government is now selling to prospective income taxpayers are not intended to raise money for defense or even to provide a profitable investment for the citizen. Their principal purpose is the withdrawal of cash from the consumer's pocket to minimize the dangers of inflation.

They happen, at the same time, to provide a good way for the taxpayers to budget those looming tax payments, which will begin next March 15, in a painless way so that the blow will not be so heavy when it falls.

The notes are well worth purchasing for both reasons.

HARDENING OF ARTERIES

I was sympathizing with a friend whose mother had recently died.

Oh, mother hasn't really been mother for the past three years; she was getting old and was childish in some of her ways."

This is the attitude of many sons and daughters who believe that because the parent is getting old, mental symptoms must naturally occur due to the arteries getting hard so blood cannot circulate properly in the brain.

That hardened arteries cause mental symptoms is true but that hardened arteries cause mental symptoms in all cases is not true.

Fortunately for our old folks today, a new specialist in medicine is at hand to help them. He is called a geriatrician, just as the child specialist is called a pediatrician. This specialist investigates the cause of mental symptoms in the old and does not take for granted that all these symptoms are due to old age.

Dr. G. Wilse Robinson, Kansas City, Mo., in the Journal of the American Medical Association, presents some interesting experiences of geriatricians who have investigated the cause of mental symptoms in old people.

Thus Dr. W. B. Wartman found in 500 consecutive examinations of the bodies of people who had died that 90 per cent of the men and 85 per cent of the women over 60 years of age had hardening of the arteries in the brain, yet it is known that 90 per cent of the men and 85 per cent of the women over 60 are not afflicted with mental symptoms. Reports by other investigators also definitely show that hardening of the arteries in the brain does not necessarily cause mental symptoms.

What, then, causes mental symptoms in old people? Just as mental symptoms may occur in the young and middle-aged due to infection, injury, following operations and other causes, so can the old be similarly affected.

In a series of 50 cases of individuals over 60 years of age under treatment for mental symptoms at the Neurological Hospital, only 14 had symptoms due to old age itself. Thirty-six of the cases were due to other causes and 90 per cent of these recovered sufficiently to go home in a few weeks under treatment given similar to that given the young or middle-aged.

New Leaflet

A very useful new leaflet has been prepared by Dr. Barton entitled 'Diet Suggestions in Hardening of the Arteries,' which may be obtained by readers who send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to The Bell Library, Post Office Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y., mentioning The Freeman. Ask for leaflet by name—'Diet Suggestions in Hardening of the Arteries.'

BABSON ON BUSINESS

WHAT ABOUT REAL ESTATE?
Babson Selects the Good From Bad

Gloucester, Mass., August 8—I am writing this column from my old home in Gloucester, Massachusetts, where I was born. This morning I walked out through the fields to a piece of land for which I once saw my grandfather pay $1,000 some fifty years ago. The family still owns the land which today would perhaps sell for $1,500. How much profit has the family gained?

Buy Productive Real Estate

Some would answer $500; but if what the family has paid for taxes and maintenance and lost in interest are considered (as they rightly should be) it is found that the family has lost $4,500. It costs nearly 10 per cent a year to carry such property. This means that having produced no income, it has cost the family in taxes, maintenance, and compound interest about $5,000. The same thing applies to much property in the United States and Canada.

Hence, the first real estate rule is to own only property which carries itself. This means buy productive real estate and sell your unproductive real estate. Don't gamble in real estate or farms. Buy such for use only. Moreover, except for a home or business, buy for cash only. Avoid unnecessary mortgages as you would smallpox. Debt has killed far more people than germs have killed!

What to Buy

The above refers to land. What about houses? Except for historical or family sentiment, avoid large houses and old houses. There are many cases where the owner would be much better off to pull down and save taxes and maintenance. When pulling them down, to avoid accident liability, sell them to someone else for $100 and let him do the dismantling. Realize that a house should be "turned in" and destroyed after a certain number of years—as well as an auto.

I believe in everyone owning his own home with enough land for a kitchen garden; but I'm not very keen for buying land or houses "just to rent." Much grief is connected with renting property. The owner always gets the worst end of the bargain; while the family who pays rent gets the best end. The depreciation is too great and no tenant is willing to pay for it.

Where to Buy

Every city—large or small—has a best street. This is the street which "down town" has the best stores and "uptown" has the best homes. Every such city is also growing fastest in some one direction. Often it is westerly, but it may be in some one of the other three directions. Now, here is a good rule to follow when buying property:

Drive along this best street in the direction that the city is growing. Stop now and then and ask the price of land. So long as the price quoted is by the "front foot" or "square foot" say "thank you" and drive along. When, however, you come to the first good location that quotes you by the "acre," stop and consider carefully. That may be the place to buy.

When to Buy

Today should be a good time to buy town property and even certain farm land. Many people are sick of their real estate investments. Rents are low and taxes are high. Mortgage money can now be secured at very low rates. Almost every bank has some foreclosed property which it is very anxious to sell. Real estate, as a whole, is now priced low.

Besides, the right kind of real estate should benefit from INFLATION which, to some extent, is surely ahead of us. Real estate is real property; it can't run away. In an emergency, it can feed, shelter, and almost clothe the family. It was the only investment which our forefather's had. It is fundamental.

What to Consider

Just as farm property should be built honestly and well insulated. Brick houses have a distinct advantage as an investment over wooden houses. Copper gutters and permanent roofing are to be desired. Remember when you buy, you, rather than the landlord, must pay the heavy maintenance costs.

This especially applies to groves, orchards, and other farms of fruit properties. With a regular farm you can change the crops from year to year according to demands. Or you can reduce the acreage. This is not true of citrus groves, apple, peach, or pecan orchards and certain other agricultural "investments."

Good Land Makes Good Citizens

Ride through any street of your community and have a good look at the grounds around the houses. You can always pick out the houses in which owners live from those in which renters live. The houses and grounds which people own and live in are well cared for. Ownership makes good citizenship.

For any community to forge ahead and be a safe place to bring up children, it must have good churches, efficient schools, and civic leaders of high character. Communities of home owners have these essentials. Hence, the importance of encouraging home ownership and farm ownership.

What About Real Estate Securities?

One does not need buy the actual real estate in order to have a hedge against inflation. There are many good corporations with their securities listed in New York or Toronto which have valuable land holdings. I have in mind certain chemical companies, certain oil companies, certain sulphur and fertilizer companies, and certain steel, copper and lead companies.

I am not recommending real estate companies which own only buildings. Avoid obsolescence—especially in the cast of hotels and apartment houses. Look to the land rather than to the buildings. Buildings decline in value with age; but well located land, which carries itself for taxes and interest, usually increases in value if bought right.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—"Sergeant York" is the only movie ever written from the Congressional Record.

As late as 1935, it was being written into the Record that Sgt. Alvin C. York, of Pall Mall, near Jamestown, in the mountains of Tennessee, could have made a fortune by exploiting his position of No. 1 hero of the World War—but chose only to pull in a few dollars for speeches and such, when the Bible class of the Church of Christ and Christian Union needed them to carry on.

Until 1941, he turned down more offers from the stage and movies than the most romantic miss ever had in wildest fancy. But finally the need for funds to carry on his work in the Tennessee hill country drove the still towering, silent hill-billy, to put his John Henry on a Hollywood contract.

When he did, there were two stipulations he insisted should be written into it. The first was that Gary Cooper, whom he had never seen off-screen, should play the role of Al York. The second was that there would be no act of heroism or deed of bravery in the movie which had not been written into the Congressional Record.

Reams of Description

The result were that the studio making the film had to trade Bette Davis to get Gary Cooper for the title role—and the story's authors had to go to the Congressional Record for every detail of the battle scenes.

What they found there were reams of description, introduced into the Senate record by Sen. Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, who still holds forth on the Senate floor and is the third oldest member of the upper house in point of continuous service. On the House side were additional reams of lurid description introduced by a slim, short-statured congressman from Pickett county, Tenn. He was addressed then as Rep. Cordell Hull.

Having seen the picture and read the Record, I can vouch for once that the Congressional Record proved a thoroughly adequate scenario. As a matter of fact there was one place where the Record was so vivid that the script writers had to tone it down. It had to do with the number of Germans Sergeant York picked off.

According to the Record, the gaunt, deliberate York (he was then a corporal, left in charge of a seven-man squad because all other officers and men had been killed or wounded) fired his rifle until it was burning hot and when 90 Germans marched down the hill to surrender (42 more were picked up later), it was because nearly 30 of their comrades had fallen under the deadly fire of this one-man blitzkrieg from the Tennessee uplands. The Hollywood scripters must have decided that was a little too much killing for the second elder of the Church of Christ. They cut the number in half.

Called It 'Natural'

Otherwise they followed the Congressional Record . . . and apparently close enough to suit the Sergeant. When he saw the picture for the first time, his first and only comment was: "It shore was natural."

The big, gangling, kindly Sergeant was in town recently and found the front door of the White House as wide open to him as that of his house on the farm in the hill country. There is at least one other door in Washington that is even wider open any time Sgt. Alvin C. York wants to walk up to it.

It's the one over at the War Department. There isn't a man living (and few dead from the Revolution on) who is a better ad for the U. S. Army. A rip-roaring hell-raising hill man who got religion and had to wrestle with his conscience before patriotism overcame his objections to war, York is the kind of hero that the propagandists dream about. And the script writers, too. Imagine having to do nothing more than sticking to the letter of the Congressional Record to get a movie!

Way to Overcome Eastern Gasoline Shortage Without Cutting Use Is Suggested

(By DAVID LAWRENCE)

Washington, Aug. 8—There's a way to overcome the gasoline shortage in the eastern area without causing the motorist to use less gasoline or to impose rationing by the 7 o'clock system. It's a method that might cost the consumer a couple cents a gallon extra but there would be as much gasoline available as there was before the cry of shortage was raised. And the strange thing about it is that the barrier in the way is neither the oil distributors nor producers but the matter of price control. For the dilemma arises in allowing the cost of shipping oil by tank car to be absorbed by the motorist and at the same time preventing the higher price from being charged on oil that did not reach the Atlantic seaboard by the tank car route. Until somebody can find a solution to that problem it will not be possible to apply the formula.

The public may not realize that there is actually no shortage of crude oil in America. Thus the annual consumption of oil in the United States is about a billion and a half barrels, whereas Germany consumes about five per cent of that amount and Britain even less than that total. But even with a consumption of about twenty times that of Germany, the reserves of American oil are not being tapped. The real difficulty, of course, is transportation. The tankers which carry the oil by water to the Atlantic seaboard have been requisitioned for use by Britain.

Is there then no other way to transport the oil from Texas and mid-continent? For a price there is a way. It would cost the consumer somewhere between two and three cents extra per gallon to pay for the more expensive method of transportation—the railroad tank cars—but it is probable that the American motorist would be glad to pay the difference in the eastern area for the brief period of the shortage.

Are there enough tank cars for the purpose? The American Association of Railroads office here has made a survey of the tank cars available. In fact the railroads and the oil companies made a joint survey in June and found that there was a surplus of about 19,500 tank cars available for the transportation of oil. This means that from six to eight million barrels of crude oil could be handled. To put in another way 20,000 carloads would supply from 200,000 to 260,000 barrels of gasoline a day. The daily consumption in the eastern area is about 1,250,000 barrels and there is a shortage due to the diversion of oil ships amounting to about 33-1/3 per cent or approximately 400,000 barrels a day.

The railroad officials figure that the tank cars could be used on a six to seven day turn around. But even calculating on a ten day round trip for the cars, the 20,000 tank cars could carry about 400,000 barrels which is equal to the shortage. If motorists practiced a bit of voluntary conservation along the lines of the advice being publicly given by the oil companies there might even be a small surplus of gasoline—and certainly no shortage in the eastern area.

Two problems are involved which would have to be settled. One relates to freight rates and the other to consumer price. As for the first, the Interstate Commerce Commission would probably approve in ten days a new freight rate based on a bulk rate if the oil companies entered a contract for transportation of large quantities of oil from mid-continent.

The increased expense of carrying the oil by tank car over the railroads would have to be absorbed by the motorist. The price control authorities here would have to sanction the transaction. There would still remain the question of how to prevent those eastern oil companies which would not have a long haul or which might have oil reserves in stock from charging the new price and making a big profit while their competitors who paid the extra costs for transporting their oil would be paying a higher transportation rate. It is difficult to separate the oil for pricing purposes since it comes in part by pipe line now to Ohio and other points inland near the Atlantic seaboard, by barges over inland waterways and in part by railroad tank cars.

It may be that the government could label with stamps the portions that came by tank car and put all of it into a reserve supply apportioning the extra supply among all oil companies and levying special tax in the eastern area of an extra cent or fraction thereof on all oil sold. Then the government would have enough money to pay the increased freight cost on any oil transported by tank car. Surely someone in the realm of oil handling can think up a kind of McNary-Haugen plan for the distribution of oil to the consumer so that America can use her untapped reserves and keep the cars moving day and night. For it is unquestionably true that passenger vehicles today are business vehicles on week days in transporting workers to and from their jobs and in hauling the millions of persons in the white collar class who are these days as active in defense tasks as are the laborers in the industrial plants.

Ban on Music Past Midnight to Be Enforced

Mamaroneck, N. Y., Aug. 7 (AP)—Another complaint about music and noise at swank Westchester Bath Club on the Boston Post Road here led to an order issued by Police Chief Arthur W. Martensen today that a village ordinance prohibiting music past midnight be enforced.

The order undoubtedly will throw confusion into the ranks of the club's society patrons who often do not begin their evening until just before midnight. John Perona, of El Morocco in New York city, is operator of the Bath Club.

The order will also come as a shock to sponsors of the "gala dinner and moonlight dance" scheduled at the club from 7:30 p. m. to 3 a. m. next Thursday, Aug. 14, by friends of Children, Inc., headed by Mrs. Clark Williams of Greenwich, Conn., and including such personages as Mr. John A. Topping, Lt. Commander Gene Tunney, Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt, Mrs. G. Schuyler Vander Poel and others.

The complaint last night was made by a resident of the neighborhood, as have the others made to police since June 13 when the club opened. Desk Sergt. Charles F. Schlierer told the Oakhurst Road, Shore Acres, resident, who did not give his name, that the club could play music until midnight. It was then 11:56 p. m.

Patrolman Herman Pauls and Hugh Downey were dispatched to the club to see that the music stopped at midnight, and with instructions to issue a summons if it did not. The music stopped.

The club is in an area zoned for residential purposes only, and under the village ordinance cited by Chief Martensen in his order to the department, music of all kinds must stop at midnight in such areas. This, the chief added, would include "juke boxes" and radios.

No juke box was planned for the dinner-dance next Thursday.

Ernie Holst and his orchestra, the El Morocco Rhumba band, are, according to Mrs. Williams, to "supply continuous dance music, in addition to Broadway, radio and movie stars who will be present, from 7:30 p. m. to about 3 a. m."

Army Gets 13 Autogiros

In an effort to solve the problem of a "flying observation post" to observe artillery fire, lines and progress of attack, and disposition of troops, the army is procuring 13 autogiros of new design to organize a test squadron for further experimentation, the War Department announced today. As soon as the squadron is formed, the field artillery, in cooperation with other interested ground forces—infantry, cavalry, and the armored force—will test the new planes in maneuvers. The new plane has a pusher propeller and officers who have seen the engineering mock-up of the cockpit find it to be a revolutionary design, from an observer's viewpoint. These autogiros will have the jump take-off feature and practically vertical descent in landing.

Many field artillery officers are of the opinion that the autogiro is well-adapted for field artillery work. In tests it has been found that this is the first autogiro rugged enough to stand up under military operations. Further tests will be carried on with the new squadron.

"Looking For Trouble," by Virginia Cowles

Perhaps there is something in women's "intuition," after all. One cannot help wondering whether, after making due allowance for a book written with the benefit of hindsight, Virginia Cowles was not guided almost as much by the subtle sixth sense credit to women as she was by logic—or even the press of events. For her book has exactly the quality of inevitability which distinguishes good fiction. She is dealing with facts as she saw them, but these facts all sound precisely as if they had been arranged providentially for Miss Cowles' benefit.

And her "Looking For Trouble" is in many ways the best written of all the dozens of books by European correspondents. It would be easy to pick small flaws in it—I was irritated by the parade of her innumerable friendships with highly important people, for example, knowing as any newspaperman does that these are exceedingly easy come by in such days as these. Yet it is the use one makes of such contacts that counts, and Miss Cowles of Boston has made the best use possible. She also has made the whole thing into a beautifully drawn panorama of Europe from the year 1936 to the present. And she has written so well that even when she leaves Nuremberg before Hitler's speech on Czechoslovakia you are likely to forget that this was an odd thing for a newspaper woman to do.

Miss Cowles went abroad with very little experience. She went first to Spain, and there she saw the war from both sides. She was in Prague before and after Munich, in the Sudetenland as the Nazis marched in, she was in Russia while Russia was being deceived, and Rome while Nazi pressure was being applied to the Italian grape. She saw Berlin on the day the war began, she saw Finland invaded, and was in Paris as France crumbled. And in London later.

There is a good deal of new material in her book, too. I do not mean that she has unearthed any new state documents, but that she has added numerous bits of color to pictures we already know—Unity Mitfor, for one. And she writes superbly. Her description of the Nuremberg party congress aforementioned is beyond words fine, for one example.

There is an empty seat at premieres of all shows in which the veteran actor, Victor Moore, appears. He always buys a ticket for his wife, who died six years ago.

Army Offers Careers To Air-Minded Troops

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)—Following the lead of Britain's Royal Air Force and Germany's luftwaffe, the army offered military flying careers today to air-minded soldiers between the ages of 18 and 22 who lack sufficient formal schooling to become officer-pilots.

Those accepted must already be in service, single, under 23, of excellent character and sound physique, and graduates of a high school or other secondary school. They must agree to serve at least three additional years.

Approved recently by Congress, the training of enlisted men as pilots is to start August 19 with the assignment of an initial contingent of about 500 men to primary flight schools.

When the undertaking is in full swing, there will be a maximum of possibly 6,000 enlisted men among the 30,000 pilots to whom the army expects to be giving wings every year.

Hitherto the army's fliers were recruited entirely from men up to 26 years old with at least two years' college training, who become second lieutenants on completing flight training. This class will still be relied on for most of the future military pilots.

The new regulations provided that enlisted men winning their wings should hold ratings of staff, technical or master sergeant pilot, with pay ranging from $108 to $189 a month.

Cecil Clovelly Speaks At Kiwanis Meeting

Cecil Clovelly, for eight years head of the talent and test department of Paramount Pictures and who is the originator and director of the student theatre at the Maverick, Woodstock, gave an interesting talk at the noonday meeting of Kiwanis Thursday discussing "The Experiences and Discoveries of a Talent Scout."

Mr. Clovelly told of the many thousands of people who each year come to New York hoping to make good, either on the screen or stage. He said that they came from all parts of the country seeking fame and fortune, but that very few out of the number are found suitable and attain their goal. As an instance, it was stated that some 800 applicants were interviewed before 50 were selected for the student theatre at Woodstock.

Personality was given as the most important quality for success on the stage.

Mr. Clovelly spent a year in England seeking talent for Paramount Pictures and although the company spent over $200,000 and a great many applicants were interviewed and given tests, the number accepted was very few.

The long hard journey that faces one who seeks to reach the top in a stage career was illustrated by one actress who, although today earns a very desirable salary as a movie star, for a long time struggled to maintain herself on $1 a day in New York city.

Sunday automobile driving may be dangerous, but it has its bright side too. It offers a good chance for you to meet a pretty nurse.

Pedestrain (to boy leading skinney, mongrel pup)—What kind of a dog is that, my boy?

Boy—This is a Police Dog.

Pedestrain—That doesn't look like a police dog.

Boy—Nope, its in the secret service.

Ruthe—What is it?

Harry—Nothing to nothing.

Alice—Has she had a legacy left her?

Cynthia—No, she is a bus conductor now.

A Happy Day

A heart full of thankfulness, a thimbleful of care,
A soul of simple hopefulness, an early morning prayer.
A smile to greet the morning with; a kind word as the key
To open the door and greet the day, what e'er it brings to thee.
A patient trust in Providence, to sweeten all the way.
All these, combined with thoughtfulness, will make a happy day.

Business goes where its invited,

Rupert—The more I look at you, dear, the more beautiful you seem.

Dorothy—Yes.

Rupert—Yes—I must look at you more often.

Show Your Colors..... Ships at sea "show their colors," that is the flags of their nationalities. They do so for indentification and protection. With four million foreigners in this country working for the overthrow of our government and destruction of our institutions it is becoming necessary for native, loyal Americans to "show their colors" for the same reasons. What this country needs is more aggressive Americanism, patriotism that shows its colors all the time, and backs them with actions unmistakable in direction and purpose.

MADE UP TO KILL

Chapter 11

Murder

CAROL had got through her big scene nicely and at her exit applause had started in the orchestra and thundered solidly through the whole house. I realized then that our audience was not as lethargic as we had supposed, but that suspense was hovering over them as well as us. They waited, as we were waiting, for the evening to end safely. That hand had been for Carol's courage as well as for her acting.

Through the wide French doors I could see her in the wings making toward the stairs, both Peterson and Jeff close at her heels. Almost two thirds over now, and Carol was still safe.

There were only Eve and old Ben Kerry and I on stage now, and in a moment Eve followed Carol through the door on stage right. Kerry lounged in the chair beside the big golden oak desk where I sat writing what was supposed to be a passionate love note. I scribbled, "Green Apples, Green Apples, Eve North in Green Apples" and rushed through my few lines with Kerry. He rose now, heavily, and with an avuncular pat on my shoulder started for the door.

The act was nearly over now, a little scene with Eve, then Carol's entrance and then the blessed respite of an intermission.

It was the half-smothered sound he made that caused me to look up from my desk and stare at old Ben Kerry and wonder hysterically if he had gone mad. Instead of exiting through the door right he had closed it softly and turned and taken one faltering step back into the room.

And then I saw his face.

For one terrifying moment I thought it wasn't Kerry's face at all. In spite of the florid make-up that he used, it had somehow the look of a plaster cast, numb and frozen. But his eyes darted wildly around the stage, stopping for a moment as they rested on me and seeing nothing.

I searched frantically for something to ad lib. "Back so soon?" rose inanely to my lips and I smothered it and could think of nothing else. I had to get the old man off the stage. Eve wouldn't make her entrance until I had.

I tried to catch his eye and motion toward the door. He stared at me and made no move to go. Silence pressed down in cold stiffling clouds over the house and then was stabbed by a titter in the audience.

I got out of my chair at last and took Kerry by the shoulders, turning him forcibly around to face the door. The titter spread to a running laugh, rolling through the audience, the balcony, the boxes. I said, trying to fight the laughter, "Good night, Uncle George," and in Kerry's ear I muttered, "For God's sake, get out!" I held the door open for him. It was then, I guess, I screamed.

Before I touched the shapeless mass on the floor at my feet, even before I saw the sharp glimmer of the knife beside it, I knew that she was dead. I knew from the way the thick velvet of the cape fell over her body and from the terrible stillness of it. I knew it and yet I screamed, "Carol, Carol!" and I tried to lift her.

I saw the jacket then, the shimmering white jacket that was splotched now with thick green stains and crumpled under her head. With feverish fingers I tore the big black cape from her shoulders. My arms went limp and numb with horror.

The back beneath the cape was hideously shriveled, the arms and shoulders a network of ancient brutal scars. Somehow I managed to put my hand under her head and turn it toward me. Eve North's dead eyes stared up into my face.

Aftermath Of Murder

IT was half past four when we left the theater. Carol sat between Jeff and me in the cab, her hands working spasmodically in her lap at the little ball of felt that had, much earlier in the evening, been a hat.

It was no good. If I could blot out Eve's face there would be Carol's. Not Carol now, white and tired, but Carol as she ran down from her dressing room when she heard my scream, and stopped and stood there above the grotesque figure in her velvet wrap.

I was crouching over Eve, staring up at Carol. I had waited for her to faint or to cry, but not to laugh. She had reached out her hand to lift a fold of the black velvet and to finger it, as though a sales girl had just pushed a bolt over the counter toward her, and she had laughed. Then Jeff slapped her, hard, for the print of his hand was white and then red across her face. He put his arm around her and led her away. She was crying then and the long choking sobs were almost as awful as that first terrible laughter.

It was Amelia's face that was the worst of all. There had been no grief nor horror on it, just a cold look that made it seem as dead as Eve's. Only once had Amelia shown any emotion. When she had started to go to Eve and Peterson's hand shot out to grasp her wrist, she had wrenched herself free as easily as if her arm had been imprisoned in a filmy spider web.

Kneeling beside her mistress she had lifted the cloak and thrown it over Eve's back and shoulders. Slowly she stood up. "You've killed her," she said. Each word was an icicle. "Don't stare at her now. She'd rather you kill her than stare."

I rubbed a clear space in the steamy window glass and peered out. We were passing Forty-eighth Street. Could it have been only last night, only nine hours ago, that Carol and I walked past this street on our way to the theater? My mind went hurtling back over those hours, seeing it all in gruesome detail; I couldn't stop it.

That static moment after Amelia's outburst which had been jabbed by Peterson's quiet cursing and Sullavan's rough voice barking into the telephone. The men trooping in from the radio cars. Blue uniforms dotting the stage, herding us into corners, standing over Eve's body. Orders in brief, sharp tones.

The door swinging wide to admit more men in uniform, more plain-clothes men, the coroner, photographers. They kept on coming, a steady one-way stream through old Nick's stage door. And in the alley outside the mumbling of the quick-gathered crowd and the yammering of the newspapermen.

I had answered questions, the same questions, until the words I spoke had taken on an unfamiliar sound and my throat grew dry and bitter. Over and over I told my story. I told it to a man with beetling brows and a ridiculously gentle voice who was the Inspector, and the police stenographer's pencil flew across his notebook as I talked. I told it to a fat detective sergeant and to a skinny red-haired one. I droned through it again for the two special investigators from the District Attorney's office, one who fumed and snapped at me, one who seemed to hardly listen.

Jinx Contributes

THOSE hours had the timelessness of a nightmare. When for a moment I had stood alone watching the coroner examine Eve, it seemed that all of it had been squeezed into a few brief seconds. But when I faced the barrage of seemingly endless questions I felt that my whole life had been spent on the stage of the Colony Theater and that those words were the only ones I had ever spoken.

We had heard the newsboys on the street yelling about the "Big Theyater Moider" before they had let us go.

Now it was over. Eve was dead and Carol was alive. There had been no arrests. I leaned my head wearily against the icy pane and it felt good. There had been no arrests. Then it wasn't over. Eve was dead but it wasn't over. Somewhere, someone was still waiting to kill Carol.

The cab stopped in front of our apartment and we went in. Jinx was sitting cross-legged on the bench in the lobby, half asleep. He jumped up with a start when the door slammed closed behind us and his bland, sleepy face told me that no word of the Colony murder had reached his ears yet. None of us wanted to inform him; we'd had enough of murder for one night.

Jinx winked one of his popping eyes at Jeff. "I see you ain't scared of riding with me no more," he chuckled.

Jeff made a noble attempt at lightness. "You're the safest pilot I've ever known, Jinx. I never know fear with you at the stick."

"You musta been scared Sunday. You walked up and down."

"I wasn't here on Sunday," Jeff said.

"Sure, you was, Mr. Troy."

I said, a little sharply, "There wasn't anyone here Sunday, Jinx. You've got your dates mixed."

He looked puzzled. "Yeah, I guess so. Sorry."

We went into the apartment and it was a warm and pleasant contrast to the bitter cold outside. I went straight to the cabinet under the built-in bookcases and put a bottle of Scotch on the coffee table. "I want a drink," I said. "A good, stiff drink. Do you?"

"Yes," Jeff said.

Carol reached into the cabinet and brought out a bottle of brandy and a shot glass. She filled the glass to the top and gulped it down. It was Courvoisier and very strong. Without even a grimace she refilled the glass and swallowed. When you'd been through what that girl had, I thought, you probably couldn't feel anything. Suddenly she set the glass down, walked slowly to the window and stood staring out.

"If I hadn't left my wrap on the stairs, Eve wouldn't have put it on. Eve wouldn't be dead. Eve would still be living and I . . ." She stopped and covered her eyes with clenched fists.

Jeff poured another shot of brandy and followed her. "Drink this."

Dairymen Using More Lime Now

Use Is Responsible for Clover on Land

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 8—Application of lime by New York farmers is chiefly responsible for an increased trend toward more clover and other legumes on dairy farms, according to Ralph Y. DeWolfe, chairman of the state A. A. A. committee.

The lime is needed to get good stands and growth of such legumes as clover on most New York farms, he says. "Since 1936, New York farmers have applied a total of 1,602,481 tons of lime to their soil. Through this liming, they have put about 500,000 acres of their land in better condition for raising legumes."

A large increase in the use of lime has been noted since 1939, the year it first became available to farmers in place of conservation payments. Orders for lime by those in the program this year total 332,808 tons to date.

Participating farmers have also improved their legume acreage by seeding legume mixtures recommended by the state college of agriculture and by using adapted varieties of seed, Mr. DeWolfe points out.

China Leader Robbed

Members of a robber band remained five hours in the Macao residence of Sun Fo, president of the Legislative Yuan of Chungking, and carried of $30,000 worth of plunder in trucks, it is reported in Shanghai, China. The thieves operated during the absence of 20 servants who had gone to a theatre. Madame Lu, mother of Sun Fo, who also was absent, especially deplores the loss of a precious jade seal.

Bigger and Better County Fair and Picnic Indicated

Early entries and the numerous inquiries being received at the Farm Bureau office indicate a larger county fair and farmers' field day at Forsyth Park here in Kingston, Wednesday, August 20. numerous Granges already have made entries and several new exhibitors have entered horses and cattle.

A special effort is being made to have a larger horse show than ever before in both the draft and light horse classes. More than the usual interest is being shown by horse owners and from present indications are that all classes will be filled. There will be five or six brood mares and colts alone. Entries already have been received from Highland, Saugerties, East Kingston, Lake Katrine and Kingston.

In the horse department Class No. 16 has been changed. It was formerly a novelty class. Class 16 is now a driving class and any light horses may be entered harnessed to a suitable vehicle. Horses will be judged for performance and manners. Any horse entered in this class may also be entered in any one of the other classes for light or saddle horses. All saddle horse owners who have not been seen and desires to exhibit a horse, are urged to get in touch with C. H. Hummer, Jr., at 36 O'Neil street, Kingston, or secure a premium list at the Farm Bureau office at 74 John street.

Horseshoe Contest

The official Ulster county horseshoe pitching championships will be held in connection with the fair. All those who desire to compete should be at the park and register by 11 a. m. The winner or county champion will receive a free trip to the state fair in Syracuse to compete in the state championships.

Bicycle Contest

Another repeat feature of the fair this year will be a bicycle riding contest for boys and girls. The winner will receive a new bicycle. All those who wish to enter must be at the judging ring about 4 o'clock and have a bicycle to ride in the competition. Boys and girls up to 16 years of age are eligible. Final rule sand regulations will be announced at the time of the contest.

The homemaking department again will fill all of the space in the pavilion at Forsyth Park. The new concrete floor in the pavilion makes this an ideal exhibit building.

All indications point to an unusually large 4-H Club exhibit, which will be housed in specially constructed shelters. Twenty-five new double exhibitions coops have been purchased for the poultry department, which will increase the size of this exhibit.

The facilities of the park, including the wading pool, handball courts, tennis courts, playground equipment, are available to visitors and many people will be interested in the enlarged zoo.

The county fair and farmers' field day replaced the farmers' picnic. Besides being a county fair, sponsored by the Ulster County Agricultural Society, it affords an opportunity for friends from all parts of the county to meet and renew acquaintances.

The usual commercial and educational exhibits will again be on display. Inquiries indicate several new commercial exhibits.

Uncertainty One of Principal Ingredients of Life in Chungking

(AP) Feature Service

Chungking—Uncertainty is one of the principal ingredients of life in Chungking today — uncertainty over the prospects of having your home smithereened in the next air raid.

The Chinese accept the Japanese attacks as an inconvenience to which life has to be readjusted, and do their best to minimize dislocation.

Life is compounded principally of discomfort, inconvenience and hardship, and only the sense of grim purpose to defeat the enemy, amounting in some cases to a kind of exaltation, makes many Chinese accept as inconsequential the conditions which would try the stoutest hearts.

Torrid, enervating heat from which rain offers only occasional and all too brief respite, is one of the many enemies of physical comfort.

Temperature indoors in the crude makeshift structures which form so many Cchungking homes and offices is nowdays about 100 degrees. Nights are sultry and sound sleep is a luxury often denied.

Chungking has the unhappy reputation of being the world's most uncomfortable capital—a reputation which no one living here challenges.

Stomach Ailments Prevalent

Few perons are lucky enough to stay here any length of time without contracting one form of stomach trouble or another—a complaint from which the doctors estimate 30 per cent of the foreign community suffers. The Yangtze is a pretty river but not so attractive when served as drinking water in bottles where a sedimate of yellow mud has settled. Ice is expensive and scarce.

Chungking probably is the most expensive city in China. Retail prices have risen twenty-five-fold since the war began. Rice, which used to cost seven or eight cents a pound, now sells for two dollars.

(Roughly, one Chinese dollar equals five cents in American money.)

A pack of 20 American cigarets cost eighteen dollars today, compared to fourteen a month ago. The supply of imported liquor is steadily being exhausted. At the Chungking club, once the home of heavy drinking, liquor is doled out in small quantities.

Few Refrigerators

In all Chungking there are berely a dozen electric refrigerators. The Chialing House, the leading hotel, where most American visitors stay, has one but it has been out of commission for two months. Coffee is a luxury, as are milk, butter and a hundred and one other things.

The Chialing House has no running water except when it rains. There are only a few restaurants where "foreign chow" is offered and where it is one's dream of a juicy steak is likely to turn into the sad reality of buffalo meat.

Most freight is moved by manpower along the hilly, narrow streets of Chungking.

There is no rationing in Chungking and restaurants are able to serve tasty and lavish Chinese meals—meals which many foreigners would find appetizing but for the Chinese indifference to flies. There are occasional rice shortages in which the poorer classes are principal sufferers.

Telephone service works only occasionally because repairmen are unable to keep up with the destruction of Japanese bombers.

Social life is affected by the discomforts of travel and the distances, yet many a foreigner will go a long way if he has a friend at whose home he may have a proper bath. A new form of invitation whose propriety is never questioned is "Would you like to have a bath?"

Hospital Conditions Appalling

Air raids always bring their misery, but to one more than to patients in hospitals whose removal to dugouts is a sore trial. Most Chungking hospitals have been destroyed and in the few still standing conditions are appalling. Prices of patent remedies known the world over reach their zenith here.

The marvel re-enacted every time the raiders come is the disvappearance of the inhabitants and much of the capital's movable property into dugouts. So efficient is the system of warnings that Japanese raiders never have visited the city unheralded.

There are discomforts here, it is true, but Chungking is in a business to which everything else is subordinated—the business of keeping Chiang Kai-shek's war machine running.

Your Garden

By the Master Gardener

Culture of Pansies

The experienced gardener thinks of the pansy as a plant of easy culture, and so it is, yet there are many points that even experienced gardeners might benefit from knowing—that will result in their securing larger flowers, a longer period of bloom, and more satisfaction and pleasure from the space they devote to this modest, attractive flower.

The pansy is known as a cool-weather flower, because it produces its largest and most highly colored blooms in cool growing weather. It makes its best display in spring, or in late summer and fall.

For the amateur, perhaps it is best to buy plants from the seedsman or florist, because the seeds of good strains are expensive, they are very tiny, and unless care is used in soil preparation and during the germination period, results from sowing of seed may be rather disappointing insofar as number of plants obtained are concerned. However, where especially fine flowers are wanted, it is desirable to buy a good strain of seed from a reliable source. There are several firms specializing in pansy seeds, and it is a good idea to purchase seed from them or from any other reliable seedsman, because seed that is old will germinate very poorly. Two prominent pansy specialists that are noted for the excellent strains they grow are : Pitzonka's Pansy Farm, Bristol, Pa.; and Harrold's Pansy Gardens, Grants Pass, Ore. The better varieties of pansies are shy seed bearers and choice seed is somewhat high priced. However, only a very, very little seed is needed, because the seeds are so small, and there are so many in a such a small quantity as ⅛ of an ounce.

Culture

One pansy specialist says that it is impossible to obtain results by the same methods everywhere—that culture must be modified and adjusted to meet local requirements—but there are certain fundamentals that will aid you in having success with pansies.

Exposure of Planting Site

Neither full sun or total shade is desirable for pansies, but a location which provides sun in the morning and shade the latter part of the day, will give best results.

Soil

The site where pansies are grown must be well drained. If the soil is heavy and gets soggy in wet weather, raise beds at least 4 inches above the level of the surrounding soil; also add sand to lighten the soil. See that the soil contains plenty of humus. Also, pansies require liberal nourishment, so use a complete plant food. Soil used for seedbeds should be fed as well as that for transplanting beds, but the seedbed should not be fed as heavily. There must be sufficient nourishment present to produce a sturdy plant.

Propagation

Propagation is ordinarily from seed, although where you wish to perpetuate a particular variety, you may propagate by cutting. Cut the plants back after blooming; the young growth which follows provides suitable cuttings, which can be readily rooted.

Propagation From Seed

Preparation of Soil

Work the soil deeply, to a depth of 6 to 8 inches, pulverizing it thoroughly. Firm well, and apply one heaping teaspoonful of complete balanced plant food per square foot of surface area, scattering it evenly and working lightly into the surface of the soil. Now water the bed well, so that the soil is completely moistened, even deeper than it has been worked. This is necessary in order that as much moisture may be stored in the bed before seeding as posible, as the less watering necessary after seeds are sown, the better the results will be.

Sowing Seed—When to Sow

Pansy seed may be sown in spring or fall. In the spring, sow seed in April; in fall, sow seed in July or August. Spring-sown seed will produce blooming plants by midsummer and they will bloom until heavy frosts; if properly cared for, such plants will live over winter and give very early flowers the following spring. Seed sown early in fall will also produce blooming plants the following spring, and such plants will continue all summer if faded flowers are removed, and if plants are well fed.

Sowing Seed—How to Sow: And After-Care

Prepare the seedbed as described under "Preparation of Soil." Sow in drills, not more than 1/16 of an inch deep. Sowing the seed in rows makes it easier to cultivate and transplant the young plants. Sow thinly, as thin seedling helps avoid loss by damping-off, and hardier and stockier plants result. Cover the seed lightly with fine sifted soil, or sand, or a combination of both. Moisten the surface with a fine spray of water, and cover the bed with coarse unbleached sheeting or newspaper, preferably supported on some sort of frame. Seed germinates in from 8 days to two weeks. Do not allow the seedbed to become dry during germination or the young plants will surely die. Water and shade the seedbed until the young plants are up, then gradually accustom them to full light. The shading must be gradually removed as there is always danger of damping-off with any kind of small plants in close, warm and damp situations. Too high temperature in the seedbed is fatal to pansy seeds, and those seeds planted in mid-summer will not germinate strongly if the thermometer in the shade ranges for a long time above 75 degrees. If the seeds are permitted to dry after they have sprouted, their vitality is gone.

Causes of Failure in Growing Pansies from Seed

Damping-off causes some difficulty. This may be avoided in some measure by keeping the plants on the dry side after the seeds are up, and until the third or fourth leaf is out. Supply just enough water to keep the plants from injury but do not keep the bed soaked.

Covering seeds too deeply is another cause of loss.

Transplanting

Transplant after the plants have attained the fourth or fifth leaf and before they have become drawn and slender from crowding. Thorough watering of the bed the day before lifting the plants is advisable as more soil will then adhere to the roots when dug. Have the soil in the permanent bed well prepared, and to assure ample nourishment for the young plants, apply a complete balanced plant food, scattered evenly over the surface of the soil at the rate of one teaspoonful per square foot of space. Work this well into the soil. Set the plants about 8 or 9 inches apart. If plants are given plenty of space blooms develop better. In transplanting, hold young plants by the leaf and not the stem, for if it is crushed, the plant may die. The neck of the plants (the part where the fleshy growth starts above the roots, give a careful weatering and water daily thereafter, if necesary, until the plants have become well established. In hot dry weather, shade the bed during the heat of the day, until the plants are rooted.

Pansy plants should commence to flower in from 70 to 80 days from the time of sowing, under reasonably favorable conditions.

Care of Plants During Summer

Keep all faded flowers removed; do not allow plants to go to seed. Pinch plants back occasionally. If your plants get rather laggy and the flowers dwindle in size, you will find by examining the plants closely that fresh shoots will be starting out in the center or crown of the plant. The old branches which have been blooming should be cut back almost to the crown, so as to throw all the strength of the plant to the new shoots. Then feed with a complete balanced plant food, one teaspoonful to the square foot of space worked well into the soil, and watered in well. Do this along about June or July, and you will be rewarded by another good crop of bloom.

Winter Protection

In the north, fall-sown pansies that are to be wintered in the open should be given as good a start in the fall as possible. Seedlings should be of fair size, 6 to 12 leaves—when transplanted and be in a firm condition of growth. Transplanted plants, if to be wintered in the open, must have good drainage and sufficient time to become established before heavy ground freezes are to be expected. A loose mulch of some light material, such as small brush, evergreen boughs, hay, straw, or some material that will not pack solidly, is good. Do not cover so heavily that the plants cannot be seen, or they will be smothered. Do not cover until the ground is frozen hard. This mulch is to prevent quick and continual freezing and thawing. Heavy soil is the cause of most winter injury, due to heaving. To correct, add sand to the soil to lighten it. Heavy freezing will not injure pansies but alternate freezings and thawings will. Covering should extend at least a foot over the edge of the bed.

If old plants are moved to a cold frame in autumn, some bloom will be secured during the milder periods of the winter.

In the South, little or no covering will be necessary to carry plants over winter. In mild climates, but subject to cold drying winds, a thin layer of straw should be placed on the plants.

Spring Care

Covering should remain on the bed until early spring, when the frost leaves the ground. On warm spring days, remove some of the covering to admit air, and gradually harden the plants. Keep the covering handy for placing back on the bed in late afternoon and during the day, should it turn cold. Sprinkle a feeding of complete balanced plant food on the soil surrounding the plants, at the rate of one tablespoonful per square foot of surface area, and work well into the soil.

Pests

Pansies are not much troubled by pests. Mildew may occasionally appear, but usually can be cleared up by a sprinkling of sulphur.

Invaded Lands Reply

Replies have been received from various invaded lands by New Zealanders who made inquries through the Red Cross concerning friends. A. A. Harker, secretary of the Auckland center of the society, states that the percentage of replies to the more than 5,000 inquiries sent out has been very satisfactory.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

No Pop?

Springfield, Mo.—Bobby Trigger is the champion hot dog eater of the North Side Boys Club again, but he's slipping.

The 12-year-old lad ate only 18 dogs at this year's picnic.

Last year it was 21.

Nice Dreaming!

Kansas City—Arthur Nelson dreamed he lost two teeth in a motocycle crash.

That was last week.

Arthur's dream came true last night.

Nothing to Sneeze at!

Omaha—Sebastion Nigro charged in District Court that straw used by a broom company flys through the air and aggravates his hay fever. He asked that it be abated and sought $25,000 damages.

And that ain't hay.

Man of His Word

Philadelphia—A bargain is a bargain with Saul Artz.

Called for induction into the army, the youth said his father had lost his job the previous day. He received deferment until things were straightened out.

Nearly a month later Saul appeared before his draft board, declaring.

"It's all right now. My father's going to work tomorrow. You can send me away as soon as you want to."

Hairline Decision

Springfield, Ill.—Superintendent Leo E. Carr has served notice that upper lip adornments no longer will be permitted among the 350 patrolmen on the Illinois state force.

Carr didn't say, in so many words, that he thought some officers were apt to spend too much time cultivating their facial fringe, but he indicated that was one consideration leading to the order.

Price Control Strict

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, has adopted strict measures to control food prices. Sr. Muniz de Aragao, director of the foodstuffs department, has organized inspection groups to visit stores every morning and evening and has invited the public to telephone complaints regarding prices direct to his department.

The play was well received by a capacity house who amply applauded the hero and booed the villain. Mrs. William Jordan gave a fine performance, both in acting and singing. The high spot of the evening was the finale when a group of Flora Dora girls danced the French Can Can. Good Taste Today

A Dinner for Seventy-five

A woman whose husband was not long ago elected to an important office is making plans for their first official entertainment. "We have decided to give a dinner," she writes, "and naturally I want to do my husband's position credit. There will be about 75 guests. Please tell me if the invitations have to be engraved, or may I write them by hand, since I don't want to suggest too much formality. We have a large apartment in a hotel and thought we'd receive our guests in our own apartment and have cocktails there, and then go down to the private dining room where dinner will be served. I thought you ought to know all these details before considering our invitation."

In answer to the question about the invitations, since you will probably do a good deal of entertaining, you will find it convenient, as well as in best taste to have a semi-engraved form, which can be filled in by hand for every possible type of party. The wording on each line must copy the following pattern. (The words in parenthesis are to be filled in by hand with the names of the guests, the type of party, the date, and the time.)

*Mr. and Mrs. Holdoffice request the pleasure of (Fill in name of guest)
company at dinner (or lunch or what it is) on (day)
at —— o'clock
2 Park Lane

*(Important note: While every one else should address their answers to the Hon. and Mrs. Holdoffice, they themselves must not use this title Honorable, at the top of their invitations or on other visiting cards.)

Since the hotel attendants will direct your guests where to go, nothing need be mentioned on your invitation about going first to your own apartment, if you decide on this plan. My advice would be to receive guests in the reception room (which is always at least always as far as I know, part of every dining room suite) and have your cocktails served there before going to dinner. The hotels will also have two coat rooms for your guests.

A Man's Fraternity Pin

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it proper for a girl to keep a man's fraternity pin after their romance has cooled off? A fraternity pin is not exactly the same as an engagement ring—I believe you have admitted this in your column—so would the same rule of having to return it, apply?

Answer: It is true that I don't know about the custom in every fraternity but in every one that I do know about, a girl would be expected to return the pin and much criticised for not doing so.

Emily Post's booklet, "The Etiquette of Weddings," will answer all the questions about the ceremony and the reception that you have been asking yourself. Send for it, enclosing ten cents. Address Emily Post, care of The Kingston Daily Freeman, Post Office Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y.

New York Health Officer Says Code Boosts Milk Cost

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—A representative of the New York City Health Department termed "absurd" today farmers' claims that rigidity of the department's sanitary code has "materially increased" milk production costs in the New York milkshed.

Testifying at a government hearing on producer pleas for higher milk prices, Samuel Abraham of the city's division of milk inspection, asserted its rejection of milk are based mostly on evidence of unclean machinery making milk unfit for human consumption.

"It is absurd," he added, "to maintain production costs throughout the milkshed are increased materially by the requirements for cleanliness of milk machines."

Abraham declared the department is "very lenient' in enforcing standards. It rejected, he said, only 18,000 of the 66,212,000 cans of milk delivered to rural plants last year.

"The very fact that we receive many thousands of applications annually from producers seeking to qualify for the New York city market show the requirements do not work to the disadvantage of producers," he said.

The hearing, expected to end today was resumed amid official encouragement to farmers that government fixing of higher milk prices can be completed by September 1.

Declares Charge Ridiculous

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)—Albert Usher, 34, a diamond broker, today characterized as ridiculous a grand larceny charge brought against him by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Belle Hart, of 131 Soundview avenue, White Plains, when he appeared in the police lineup. Mrs. Hart told police she had given Usher $5,000 to purchase diamonds and that she never received the diamonds or money. Usher was arrested yesterday at LaGuardia Field as he was about to board a plane for Detroit.

Closings May Hit 2,000,000

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)—Leon Henderson, chief of the office of price administration, said today that the defense program, necessitating the shifting of production and the closing of some plants, might cause the temporary unemployment of 2,000,000 workers. He made the statement to newsmen in explanation of testimony before the House banking committee during which he said that the dislocation of employment might reach the proportions experienced in England where, he said, it amounted to 20 or 25 per cent.

Two Men Get 20 Days in Delaware County on Charge

Robert Dressler, who lives at the Hofbrau, St. James street and George Harris of 33 Grand street, were sentenced to 20 days each in the Delaware county jail when arraigned before Justice George S. Mayes of Fleischmanns this morning. Dressler was charged with reckless driving and Harris with allowing an unlicensed driver to operate his car.

The charges arose out of an accident in Fleischmanns Wednesday night when Harris's car, being driven by Dressler, ran into another car. At that time Dressler was arrested by Trooper McGarvey and Justice Mayes imposed a fine of $10 for driving without a license. He did not have the money and was permitted 24 hours to return to Kingston and get the cash.

When he did not appear a warrant was issued for his arrest on the reckless driving charge. He and Harris were picked up Thursday by Kingston police and turned over to Troopers Dunn and Fordham, who took them to Margaretville.

When arraigned this morning, Dressler paid the original fine of $10, but was given 20 days on the reckless driving charge. Harris pleaded guilty to the charge of allowing an unlicensed operator to drive his car and was also given 20 days in jail.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)—Specialties accounted for the few feeble rallying flurries in today's stock market while most leaders shifted indifferently over a narrowly irregular route.

Some buying cropped up on the theory a come-back might be in the offing after the nine-session stalemate. The majority of gains that appeared were in minor fractions and declines were plentiful near the final hour. Dealings were relatively sluggish, transfers being at the rate of about 500,000 shares.

Aside from the usual speculative wariness preceding a week-end, brokers said, Wall Street still was dubious regarding the war, the Far Eastern crisis, taxes and price controls. Labor news, it was added, served as a handicap. Mild optimism was derived from the fact offerings never were urgent. Business prospects continued to prop individual issues.

Rail bonds improved and commodities were a shade uneven.

Among stocks Consolidated Aircraft was lifted to a new 1941 top. Resistant also were Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, Pan American Airways, Santa Fe, Allied Chemical, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler and du Pont.

Behind, at times were General Motors, U. S. Steel, Anaconda, Texas Corp., Southern Railway, U. S. Rubber and American Telephone.

In the curb, moderately higher inclinations were exhibited by Brewster Aero, Glen Alden Coal, Electric Bond & Share and Pennroad.

Most Timber in U. S. In Private Ownership

Who knows the timber in the United States, that is, the timber which is mature and ready to cut?—was asked of Professor Raymond J. Hoyle of the New York State College of Forestry, Syracuse University.

Professor Hoyle said, "The latest classification of ownership of stands of saw timber in the United States was in 1938 and that showed that there were altogether 1,763 billion board feet. Part of this is divided between Forest Service, or what is called the National Forest, and the Indian reservations, the reservations having only 39 billion board feet.

He continued, "There are some 71 billion feet under government control not included in the National Forest nor in the Indian reservations. States, counties and municipalities own 59 billion and private ownership, which is by far the largest, is figured at 1,026 billion feet. Out of this the farm woodland owner has 221 billion and the industrial owner has 805 billion. This large industrial ownership, to some of the industries, has been a great handicap because of the enormous amount of taxes which must be paid on the land.

Therefore, they are endeavoring to cut and sell their timber as rapidly as possible. At present, there is an effort to control the cutting on privately-owned woodlands to insure a continuous production of timber. This question is being debated by the federal authorities and private owners at the present time.

There should, however, be some protection for the private owner outside of the industry, such as the farmer, who should avail himself of the services of a professionally trained forester.

Hull Says Germany Looks Toward U. S. With Greedy Visions of Future Conquest

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)—Secretary of State Hull said today that Germany was looking with longing eyes to the western hemisphere for further conquest.

He asserted also that Japan alone was responsible for any encirclement of itself in the Pacific.

These comments were made by Hull at his press conference on statements by official spokesmen in Berlin and Tokyo.

The Berlin sources said a German campaign was to be launched to expose what they called ruthless power politics by President Roosevelt in Latin America.

The Japanese spokesman asserted that Japan was encircled by the United States, Britain, China and the Netherlands.

Hull described the Berlin claim as a transparent piece of propaganda which he said would not deceive, much less be seriously considered, by any country in this hemisphere.

It came, he added, from a group representing a government which had ruthlessly seized some 15 countries in Europe and was looking with longing eyes to this hemisphere for further conquest.

Eight Counties To Cut Assessment Of O.&W. Railroad

Nearly 300 tax assessors, supervisors and other officials from eight counties tranferred by the N. Y., O. & W. Railroad met with Federal District Judge Murray Hulbert at Hancock Tuesday afternoon to discuss action to be taken regarding assessment of O. & W. property in the territory affected and arrears of around a million and a half dollars in taxes.

Present from Ulster county were Charles F. Kaiser, Jr., of Ellenville, Ulster's representative on the eight-county committee; County Treasurer Chester A. Lyons, County Auditor Jay Heaton, Jay W. Rifenbary of the Board of Supervisors and George W. Moore, assessor of the city of Kingston.

Judge Hulbert told the gathering that if the railroad is to continue to operate, expenses, including taxes, must be reduced to a point where the revenue of the road can meet them. Otherwise the bondholders will take over the load, it will be sold for whatever it will bring and its operation will end.

Net result of the meeting was an apparent willingness on the part of all eight counties to cut the 1940 assessed valuation about 66 per cent, substantially in accordance with a schedule submitted by Samuel H. Fancher of Walton, tax agent for the O. & W.

A number of reductions in assessment were reported, including: City of Middletown reduced from $240,000 to $63,000; town of Hancock from $500,000 to $169,000.

It was brought out that the O. & W. a few years ago had an income of $14,000,000 a year, but today the income is about $6,000,000 a year. One lost source of income was from the Scranton Coal Co., which with its affiliates gave a tonnage worth about $1,000,000 a year.

Attempts to increase income, under Trustee Lyford, have met with some success and $200,000 to $300,000 additional traffic in 1931 is expected. It is hoped that about $100,000 will be available for tax payments in the eight counties this year and that operating conditions may be brought to a basis that will bring a loan from the R. F. C. to facilitate the payment of unpaid taxes.

House Vote Due On Army Bill

moments later, when, with several uniformed men in the galleries watching intendly, the Senate voted, 39 to 34, for an amendment by Senator Mead (D., N. Y.) providing the $10 monthly pay boost.

Senator Adams (D., Colo.) attacked the amendment as a "haphazard" proposal that might actually reduce the number of men in the army, unless additional appropriations were made quickly. He pointed out the army was governed by appropriations already made and would have to cut its personnel if it were forced to raise pay without getting more money.

Three Are Hurt At Ulster Park

Exchange of Seats Causes Driver to Lose Control

Three persons were injured about 5:30 Thursday afternoon in an automobile accident on 9-W, at Ulster Park, when a car driven by Ralph Etchevria, 47, of 1960 East 24th street, Brooklyn, a driver for Sheffield Farms, left the road and hit a pole.

Mrs. Etchevria suffered cuts and lacerations about the right side of the head and face, a broken right wrist and possible chest injuries. She was reported in fairly good condition at the Kingston Hospital this morning.

A daughter, Camille Etchevria, 21, was treated by Dr. C. B. Van Gaasbeek for a cut over the left eye and Jack Hecht of 734 Ocean avenue, Brooklyn, was treated for bruises on both arms.

Deputy Sheriffs Vredenburg and McCullough and Trooper Gonet, who investigated the accident found that Mr. Etchevria lost control of the car when Mrs. Etchevria, who was riding in the back seat of the coach, exchanged seats with her daughter, who was riding in the front seat. The car was quite badly damaged from the impact with the telephone pole.

27th Division Will Meet at Rochester

President William W. Long of Albany, president of the 27th Division Association, announced today that the association will meet at 12:30 o'clock p. m., Friday, August 15, in the Hotel Seneca, Rochester, in connection with the American Legion Convention held at that time.

Headquarters for the 27th Division will be at the Hotel Cadillac, Rochester.

President Long urged the members of the division to volunteer for some part of the program of national defense and remarked they will have the unique privilege of serving under former commanders.

"These members of the old 27th who have volunteered for service on boards of the Selective Service System are under the leadership of a former president of our association," he declared, "for Brigadier General Ames T. Brown, the adjutant general of New York, is also New York state director of selective service. The same is true if they serve in the New York Guard.

"If any 27th Division veteran is not working for some agency of the State Council of Defense, then I want to urge him to get in touch with one of the 61 city or 62 county local defense councils," President Long emphasized. "He will have an opportunity to serve under Major General John F. O'Ryan, our war-time commander, who is director of the State Council of Defense."

President Long mentioned the excellent war record of the division and stated:

"In a different way, perhaps, but equally effective, we have an opportunity to serve our country today. I am certain the 27th division will be at the front in offering its services for national defense."

Recs Will Play McEnaneys Tonight at Local Stadium; Bush or Neff Will Pitch

Albany Has Well-Known Stars in Line-Up for Game; Coleman Recs' New Spark

The Albany McEnaneys, champs of the capital city, will be the attraction tonight at municipal stadium with the Kingston Recreations under the floodlights. Starting time is scheduled for 8:45 o'clock.

Earlier in the season the Albany club pasted Fred Davi's Colonials 10 to 4. Joe Brown hurled for the losers but received poor support. The "Big Train" isn't expected to get the call in tonight's game, however. Either Bob Bush or Charlie Neff is due to do the flinging.

Chuck Yanni, who has been playing with the Recs the last few weeks, is a product of the McEnaneys. However, the third sacker will not be in the uniform of the capital district team tonight. He'll be facing his former teammates in the livery of the local club.

Familiar to Locals

The Albany club has been having another good year so far, getting a number of wins over high-powered opposition. Kingston players are well aware of the strength of this invading club tonight, having played against the club in former years. Many of the Albany stars were formerly connected with Troy of the New York State League.

Vennand is the probable hurler for the McEnaneys tonight. Miggins on first, Williams, who played with Kingston this year on the road at second; Plante on third and S. Kane at short. Kearney, Semerad and W. Kane will do outfield work. Tibbett is due to start behind the plate.

Inspired with their showing against the fast-stepping Philadelphia Stars Wednesday night, the Recreations look to tonight's tussle as means of returning to the victory streak again. Albany, after watching the Recs this week, must have a lot in readiness to drop Kingston.

One of the most welcomed additions to the Recs in recent weeks is Ralph Coleman of Nyack. Coleman made a big hit with the fans Wednesday night in poling out four straight off the offerings of Edsel Walker. With Coleman around the initial bag, Billy Ostrom will be in the outfield tonight along with Tommy Maines and Jimmy Ashdown.

Kingston's inner defense also looked good Wednesday with the exception of Eddie Sabo who looked slow on a number of balls hit to him or near his territory. On the other hand, Coleman, Bobby Van Herper and Chuck Yanni played sensational ball and kept Ostrom out of any further trouble.

Another player who made his debut appearance before the home crowd Wednesday was Vince Stoll. In his trips, Stoll slapped out a single. Vince might be in for some extra duty since "Whitey" Kowalcyk can't shake his batting slump.

Preparations are still going ahead for the outstanding attraction of the year Tuesday, August 19, when the famous Bushwicks play here. The Bushwicks have a wealth of former major and minor league talent. Although this game will have to go a long way in surpassing Wednesday's thriller the local experts are sure the fans who see this classic battle will be in for a lot of high class baseball.

The probably lineups for tonight's game:

Nation's Ace Skeet Shooters to Begin Annual Tourney

No Champion of 1940 Has Been Able to Defend Crown; Five Are Tied for Title

Indianapolis, Aug. 8 (AP)—Now that they've decided all the titles with the smaller guns, the nation's top-flight skeet shooters will spend three days being kicked around by 12-gauge weapons as they seek the team and individual "blunderbuss" crowns at the Seventh Annual Tournament.

The 250-target event calls for 100 clays to be fired at today, another "century" Saturday and 50 more Sunday. In addition to the individual titles for amateurs, professionals and women, the field of 350 or more will shoot it out for the veterans', father-and-son, five-man and two-man team championships.

Throughout the tourney this year not a 1940 champion has been able to retain his crown.

Also on today's slate was the finnish of a shootoff for the "Champion of Champions" title, in which five of 35 state and sectional title-holders tied yesterday with perfect scores of 100. They started the shootoff late yesterday and were still at it when darkness fell.

Daughter of Golf Pro Has Advantage In Tourney Play

Joanne Barr of Rye Wins Place as Semi-Finalist in State Competition; Sinks 28-Foot Putt

Bronxville, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—The best prescription for becoming a star woman golfer is to be the daughter of a golf pro. The advantages are obvious and the examples so numerous that it's only necessary to point to the newest professional's daughter on the tournament scene.

She is 19-year-old Joanne Barr of Rye, who is a semi-finalist in the New York State Women's Championship. As daughter of the Rye Country Club pro, Miss Barr acquired a sound game. She played a courageous game too, to eliminate Mrs. Sylva Annenberg of Flushing, twice holder of the title, in a 19-hole match yesterday. Miss Barr was four down on the 14th green. She won four holes to square the match, getting a break when Mrs. Leichner bobbled a two-foot putt on the 18th, then sank a 28-foot putt herself to take the extra hole.

Today Miss Barr faces Mrs. Ruth M. Torgerson of Great Neck winner yesterday over Ann Pink of Rye, 5 and 3, after eliminating defending champion Marjorie Harrison of Troy on Wednesday.

The other semi-final sends Virginia Guilfoil of Syracuse, a semi-finalist for the third time, against 20-year-old Shirley Podret of Poughkeepsie, a protege of Tom Creavy, former P. G. A. champion, and one of the surprise winners of the tourney.

In her last two matches, Miss Podret has disposed of Mrs. Harry McNaughton, the pre-tourney favorite, and Janet Younker, last year's runner up. She beat Miss Younker 3 and 2 yesterday while Miss Guilfoil, now an overwhelming favorite to take the title, whipped Mrs. Joseph C. Dey, Jr., of Locust Valley, 5 and 3.

Po'keepsie Defeats Niagara Falls for State Junior Title

Don Hempe, Southpaw, Hurls Club to Victory; Permits Three Hits, Whiffs 13 Batters

Don Hempe, southpaw hurler of Poughkeepsie High School during the recent scholastic baseball season, and who pitched a no-hitter against Kingston High School, gained more glory yesterday in Glens Falls.

On the hill for the Poughkeepsie American Legion junior baseball club, Hempe turned in a 7 to 2 win over the Washington County Post of Niagara Falls for the championship of New York state.

The portsider hurled another sensational contest, fanning 13 and permitting only three hits. The Bridge City winners spiked the offerings of Smith for nine.

McCombs, Hempe and F. Whelan collected two hits apiece for Poughkeepsie. Hempe's offerings baffled all of the Niagara batters with the exception of D. Yole who collected all three hits off the hurler.

With the New York state title safely tuckey away, Poughkeepsie now waits for the winner of the New England-New Jersey playoff which is expected to take place during next week at Trenton, N. J.

Joe Wood Jr. Hurls No-Hit Classic for Scranton Miners

'Smoky Joe', Father of Hurler, Did Trick 30 Years Ago; Watches Game in Stands

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP)—Thirty years ago "Smokey Joe" Wood smoked a baseball past the St. Louis Browns for a no-hit, 5 to 0 shutout for the Boston Red Sox in the American League.

Last night he sat in the stands and watched his son duplicate that feat for the Scranton Miners against the Albany Senators in the class A Eastern League.

It was like father-like son as Joe Wood, Jr., graduated from Yale University two months ago, set the Senators down without a hit to give his mates a 5 to 0 triumph.

Only 29 batter faced the 25-year-old righthander who said after his masterpiece "I was just lucky."

Mort Cooper Pitches Cards Back Into First With Win Over Cincinnati Reds, 3-2

Hurling of Stricken Ace Peps Redbirds; Lopez Homers for Pirates to Trim Chicago

MORT COOPER

(By The Associated Press)

The St. Louis Cardinals are back on top of the National League see-saw today, but their position in the standings is not as important as the fact that Mort Cooper is back with his pitching magic.

Until he developed elbow trouble in June, the 27-year-old righthander figured to be the ace of Billy Southworth's pitching corps. Then when he had to have an operation nobody knew whether he would pitch better—or not at all.

Cooper returned to the lineup July 27 and pitched part of the ninth inning against the Boston Braves. Then he was given a starting assignment against the poor Phillies last Sunday. He hurled a six-hit victory.

Yesterday came the real test when Cooper was sent out against the Cincinnati Reds and pitched and batted the Cardinals to a 3-2 11-inning victory that put St. Louis in front of the idle Brooklyn Dodgers again by just a shade. The Cards have a half-game lead but their percentage advantage is only .6442 to .6436.

Cooper held Cincinnati scoreless till the seventh in a pitching duel with Bucky Walters, whom the Cards cut for a run in the second. Then they struggled scoreless again till the 11th, when Johnny Mize singled, Enos Slaughter doubled, and Estel Crabtree and Cooper singled for two runs.

The Reds got one of these back in the 11th, bringing Sam Nahem to the mound for the final out, but this scarcely detracted from Cooper's ninth victory and the fact that the Cards' staff is complete again.

In the only other National League game, the Pittsburgh Pirates took a 4-3 decision over the Chicago Cubs on Al Lopez' homer with two out in the ninth. Sparked by Hank Leiber's circuit smash the Cubs scored three times in the second inning to drive Ken Heintzelman from the box, but Lloyd Dietz held them scoreless the rest of the way. Pittsburgh capitalized on their seven hits off Jake Mooty. It was the Pirates' sixth straight triumph and their 18th in 21 games.

Sox Trim Yankees

The New York Yankees dropped a 9-5 verdict to the Boston Red Sox for their fifth loss in seven contests. Heber (Dick) Newsome limited the Yanks to eight hits. Ted Williams hit his 22nd homer and two singles to lead Boston's 12-hit attack on three New York pitchers.

The defeat did not reduce the Yankees' American League lead, however, for Detroit downed Bob Feller and the Cleveland Indians, 4-3, in 13 innings. Feller struck out 13, but walked 11 and in the eighth inning forced in one run with a pass when the bases were loaded. John Gorsica didn't allow a run for eight innings, but Clarence (Soup) Campbell came through with a pinch-homer with two on in the ninth to tie the score for Cleveland, and bring in Schoolboy Rowe, who got credit for the victory when the Tigers made three singles in the 13th.

The Washington Senators sent the once-hopeful Philadelphia Athletics crashing to their fifth straight defeat, 5-4, on six-hit pitching by Sid Hudson and Walt Masterson and an attack led by Catcher Al Early, who supplied two doubles and two singles. Sam Chapman hit a homer and triple for all the A's runs.

The Chicago White Sox went on a hitting spree in the last four innings of a night game, pounding out 17 hits to beat the St. Louis Browns, 11-1, behind the seven-hit hurling of Buck Ross. Taft Wright, Don Kolloway and Joe Kuhel collected 10 of the blows, including Kuhel's 11th homer.

CITY SOFTBALL LEAGUE

The I.L.G.W.U. softball team of the City League suffered its worse defeat of the year Wednesday night at the hands of the 7th Ward Club by 9 to 3 at Block Park. The game, however, is under protest on a charge made by the I.L.G.W.U. that the winners used an ineligible player. The player in question was Tomaseski.

"Coke" Costello started on the mound for the Union team and retired in the start when the Warders pushed five runs across the plate. Bob Balfe relieved him and suffered the same fate. Balfe was reached for 10 hits and four markers.

What Makes the Yankees Click?

Farm Plan and Expert Scouts Pay New Yorkers Big Dividends

This is the second in a series of three stories on the factors behind the New York Yankees' baseball successes.

By DILLON GRAHAM
Sports Editor, (AP) Feature Service

New York—The Yankee stars are farm grown. Since New York began its minor league system in 1932 it has bought only one player in the open market—Joe DiMaggio—and outbid others for free agent Tom Henrich.

That DiMaggio purchase was a victory for the Yankee scouts.

Other talent judges were afraid to gamble on Joe because of injuries he had suffered in the Pacific coast loop but scout Bill Essick figured DiMag would be a star. The Yanks paid $25,000 and four players, worth another $20,000, for Joe. Henrich was signed for $25,000.

But the foundation of any major league baseball club these days is its farm system.

And so the success of the Yankees can be traced back largely to their efficient empire of minor league clubs and to the excellent corps of scouts who discover prospects on college, sandlot and independent teams.

The St. Louis Cardinals were the pioneers in the farm club movement. And it wasn't until a decade ago that the late Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, tired of gambling on expensive ball players bought in the open market and acquired a chain of minor league clubs.

He picked George Weiss, then general manager of the Baltimore International league club, to head his chain system. And it has been mainly through Weiss' genius that the Yankees have built such a fine farm system

The Yankee chain now includes a dozen clubs, headed by Kansas City in the American association and Newark in the International league, both AA loops. Most Yankee players spend some time at one of these clubs before joining the varsity.

The other clubs are: Class A, Binghamton; Class B, Norfolk and Augusta; Class C, Akron, Joplin, Amsterdam, and Idaho Falls, and Class D, Butler, Pa., Norfolk, Neb., and Easton, Md. Newark, Kansas City, Binghamton, Norfolk, Va., and Akron are Yankee property and the club has working agreements with the others.

In addition to DiMaggio and Henrich, here's how the other Yankees were acquired:

Outfielder Frenchy Bordagaray and Catcher Ken Silvestri were obtained through farm trades.

Frankie Crosetti, Bill Dickey, Lefty Gomez and Red Ruffing came to New York before 1932.

Ruffing came from Boston in a trade for Cedric Durst and cash. Dickey cost around $17,500, Gomez about $40,000 and Crosetti approximately $50,000. All the other players are farm grown.

These came from sandlot clubs: John Sturm, Charles Stanceau, Gerald Priddy, Phil Rizzuto, George Selkirk, Buddy Rosar, Ernie Bonham, Marvin Breuer, and Atley Donald.

These were signed by scouts while playing college ball: Joe Gordon, Red Rolfe, John Murphy, Marius Russo, Spurgeon Chandler, Norman Branch, Charles Keller and Steve Peek.

Receives Diploma At the Radio University

Uncle Sam's army air corps had an additional 131 radio men today as a class which included Pvt. Arthur N. Sottile, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frances Sottile, 41 East Strand, received diplomas in a special graduation exercise at Scott Field, "the radio university" of the air corps, located 23 miles east of St. Louis, Mo., in Illinois.

The class completed the regular 22-week radio operators and mechanics course and the members are now qualified for active duty with any army air corps unit in the United States or territorial possessions.

Classes graduate every two weeks at Scott Field and average nearly 300 students in each class. The special graduation was held by the department of communications because of a change in schedules, according to Col. Wolcott P. Hayes, commandant.

Formerly the home of lighter-than-air craft, Scott Field now is the chief provider of "ears" for the air force. Rapid expansion of facilities will enable the school to turn out an increasing number of students each year, the goal being 20,000 graduates per year.

Practical work in technical details as well as a thorough background are provided the students during their 22 weeks of intensive study.

A Matter of Confidence
WE OFTEN WISH OUR PATRONS KNEW AS MUCH ABOUT DIAMONDS AS WE DO.
This, however, is not always possible since we have made them a life study and feel that, if there is anything that we do know well it is Diamonds.
To those who know diamonds our stock speaks for itself. From those who do not possess such expert knowledge we invite their fullest confidence and assure them that such confidence will never be misplaced.
